BANKERS ARE GUESTS HERE

Approximately 150 Are Entertained
With Chicken Dinner at Social Club After Session.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Next Meeting Will be Held in Newcastle—Federal Reserve Law is Discussed by Speaker.

Approximately one hundred and fifty bankers from fourteen eastern and southeastern Indiana counties were entertained here today on the occasion of the annual meeting of group six of the Indiana Bankers association.

The session began in the Princess theater at eleven o'clock and continued until shortly before one o'clock, when final adjournment was taken and bankers were escorted to the Social Club rooms, where a chicken dinner was served. A short cabaret entertainment by Miss Martha Hogsett and Jess Pugh was to follow the meal.

The only digression from the set program was a short speech by James E. Watson who came into the meeting a few minutes before it closed. The report of the nominating committee selecting the officers for the year and naming Newcastle for the next meeting place, was adopted by acclamation.

The principal speech of the meeting was delivered by T. J. Davis, vice-president of the First National bank, Cincinnati. He devoted himself, discussing the subject, "Modern Banking," almost exclusively to pointing out the advantages and disadvantages of the national banking act. His speech was read from manuscript and was largely technical in its nature.

John R. Millikan, assistant cashier of the Citizens State bank of Newcastle, was named chairman for the coming year and L. K. Tingley, cashier of the First National bank of Connersville, was elected secretary. A. L. Winship, president of the Rushville National bank, was selected as the member of the nominating committee. The new executive committee follows: A. E. Nowlin, president of the Dearborn National bank of Lawrenceburg; J. J. Riebold, cashier of the Laurel bank; G. B. Russell, cashier of the First National bank of Hartsville; Adolph Cooper, cashier of the Farmers State bank of Middletown; Harry C. Morrison, cashier of the First National bank of Shelbyville.

At the outset, Mr. Davis said that his appearance here gave him opportunity to make his personal acknowledgement of his regard for Indiana bankers for their support of him when he tried to be elected as an official of the American Bankers association.

He said the matter pressing for solution now was whether the bankers should or should not join the intra-district associations under the federal reserve system. He asserted that under the old national banking laws there had been no means of bringing in new money in a crisis, except by one method.

Mr. Davis declared that had the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency law or the federal reserve system in effect, much of the financial distress of 1893 and 1907 could have been avoided. He said the enactment of the former law in 1908 enabled the banks to obtain money in emergencies other than through government bond securities.

It was fortunate, he said, that the old law (the Aldrich-Vreeland act) was kept on the statute books because the new federal reserve law

STILL ANOTHER CONVENTION

W. R. C. District Meeting Will be Held Here Next October.

Attention today was called to the fact that the seven conventions of more than local significance, mentioned yesterday, which will be held here during the summer, are not the only ones which are scheduled for Rushville. The annual district meeting of the W. R. C. will also take place in Rushville next October, about the middle of the month. Rush county is in the fourth district and the other counties comprising it are Bartholomew, Decatur, Dearborn, Fayette, Ohio, Shelby and Union.

WEATHER MAN IS PROMISING FROST

Fruit Growers And Gardeners, However, Are Not Sure Whether It
Is A Promise Or A Threat

SOME DAMAGE MAY BE DONE

The weather man sent terror into the hearts of fruit growers and gardeners who planted early this spring when he said today that there might be frost "in the low places" tonight. The continued low and unseasonable temperatures for the last few days have caused fruit men and truck gardeners to be fearful of the future because vegetation is in such an advanced state that a frost of any sort is liable to do considerable damage.

The extremely warm weather in April brought fruit to such a stage that it is now in great danger of being seriously damaged. It is not thought likely, however, that the frost will seriously affect any of the farm crops. The only thing that prevented frost during the last nights, in the opinion of many, was the clouded skies. The temperature has been as low as forty degrees above zero.

COLLECTIONS ARE NEARLY $300,000

Books of County Treasurer Show
But $1,677.22 of Spring Tax
Installment is Unpaid.

BELIEVE IT SMALLEST YET

Figures in the office of County Treasurer Williams show that only $1,677.22 remains unpaid in taxes on realty in Rush county from the spring payment of taxes. This is a rather remarkable figure and shows that there will be but a small amount of delinquent tax. The amount does not include poll tax unpaid.

A total of $280,005.38 was collected from the spring installment. The total on the last day was $22,044.05. The officials at the treasurers office are elated over the showing and believe that the amount remaining unpaid is the smallest in the history of the county. It was stated that a total of $320,000 was to be collected in taxes at the spring installment, but the officials did not take into consideration that $25,000 was to come out of this figure in road taxes that were worked out.

The amount remaining unpaid on realty by townships is as follows:

Carthage corporation, $40.05; Ripley, $14.67; Posey, $94.50; Walker, $55.83; Orange $86.76; Anderson, $129.88; Rushville, $252.10; Jackson, $25.78; Center, $156.39; Washington, $46.16; Glenwood, $12.81; Union $112.82; Noble, $53.50; Richland, 108.74; Richland, $108.74; Rushville City, $487.23.

SENDS REPORT TO COMMISSION

Dixie Highway Committee For Rush
County Completes Work Gathering Data on Local Route.

CARE USED IN PREPARATION

No Feature is Overlooked, Including
Request That Historical Attractions be Mentioned.

The Dixie Highway commission of five members for Rush county has completed its report on the proposed route in Rush county and forwarded a copy to each of the fourteen members—two from each of seven states—of the Dixie Highway commission.

The Rush county committee spent considerable time at the task and answered all the questions asked by the commission fully and with diligent care and detail. They went into the historical feature and located some of the famous spots and pointed with pride to many of the things in Rush county history of which its residents are proud.

The committee made a careful survey of the whole route, giving the number of bridges and describing them, describing carefully the condition of all the roads and setting forth just what the commission might expect from Rush county. The committee even went further. It described the road all the way from Indianapolis to the point where it leaves Rush county because there will be no committee west of Rush county to do this work since the proposed route does not pass through any county seat towns between here and Indianapolis. The report in full follows:

We beg leave to submit to you the following report with reference to the proposed Dixie Highway passing through Rush county, Indiana.

We note in your resolutions adopted at a meeting in Louisville, Ky., April 23d, 1915, you have asked for certain information, and we beg leave to report to you with reference to the highway in this county as follows:

1st, Mileage in Rush County, under the proposed route. Answer, 21.45/100 miles.

2d, Conditions of this road in mileage classified.

(a) Highly improved with hard surface. Answer, the entire length of the road.

(b) Gravel, etc. Answer, the 9 7/10 miles on west end consists of the very best of river gravel, mostly on stone foundation, and very finely maintained. Brick, 1 4/10 miles, being a smooth first class piece of work on concrete foundation, which passes from the outskirts of Rushville on the west through Rushville, and south on the Andersonville road to the little town called Circleville, from this point, for all the 10 35/100 miles to the southeast, road is macadam, and which is first-class in every respect. The County Commissioners are preparing the way to scarify and roll this road and put it in a very fine condition.

(d) Grades and drainage. Answer, The grades and drains on the entire route are first-class, the road is well graded and no water stands on the side of the road or in the road through its entire length during heavy rains and there is no grade on its entire route that would be over 3 per cent.

3d, Number and character of bridges classified.

(a) All the bridges on the entire route are concrete, except the bridge over Little Blue River, which is a Kennedy wooden arch, and is first-class, and except the Kennedy

RESULT NOT KNOWN YET

Conference Held and Dissatisfaction is Said to Prevail.

(By United Press.)

Tokio, May 5.—The result of the conference between the cabinet and the elder statesmen will not be known until tomorrow. It is considered certain, however, that the ultimatum calls for consent to the modified Japanese demands within a short time—some of the newspapers say forty-eight hours. There is much dissatisfaction with the Chinese attitude, especially the demand that certain sections of the Japanese suggestions be reduced to writing.

JAP SITUATION LOOMS IMPORTANT

Expected in London That Ultimatum
to China Will be Refused—Time
Limit 24 Hours.

POSSIBILITIES INVOLVED

(By United Press.)

London, May 5.—The Japanese situation loomed up extremely important this afternoon. Tokio reports say that the Japanese ultimatum granted only twenty-four hours for China to reply. It is expected that the reply will be a refusal to meet the Japanese requirements. This will be followed, it is expected, by hostile action by Japan.

British officials are watching the situation very closely because of the possibilities that are involved. The British-Japanese treaty contained no provision which would permit England to do more than advise Japan.

FLOCK OF HERON IS DRIVEN AWAY

Domicile of Bird Rare to This Part of Country Destroyed and
They Have Departed.

CLUB OUTING HERE SPOILED

The woodcutter has spoiled the outing which the Indiana Nature Study Club of Indianapolis planned to take in this county, just south of here, in the Webb's ford neighborhood. It was announced some time ago that the club would come here in a special car April 25 and proceed to Webb's ford to see a flock of heron, very rare in this part of the country, but it now develops that the clump of elm trees in which the heron made their abode have been cut down since a member of the Nature Study Club last investigated and the heron have departed for unknown points.

Just before the proposed outing, a representative was sent down here to see if the heron were still nesting in their own domicile. It was a sore disappointment to the club because its members had been anticipating the trip with much pleasure.

The funeral services of Dennis Driscoll will be conducted Thursday morning at nine o'clock in the St. Mary's Catholic church and burial will take place in Calvary cemetery.

B. A. Black, who has been ill for a few days at his home in North Jackson street continues about the same.

VERDICT IS FOR UNION TRACTION

Jury Finds For Defendant in Damage
Suit Brought by Charles
Fletcher of Newcastle.

COURT APPOINTS GUARDIAN

Motion is Filed for New Trial in
Cavitt Drain Case—One Irvine
Case is Heard.

A verdict for the Union Traction company, defendant in the damage suit brought by Charles A. Fletcher, owner of a taxi cab line in Newcastle, was returned by the jury this afternoon after being out about two hours. The case was sent here on a change of venue from Henry county and started in the circuit court Monday.

Fletcher alleged that the traction company was liable for the destruction of an automobile through negligence of the motorman. The accident occurred in 1913. Fletcher demanded $2,000 damages for the loss of the automobile. The final arguments in the case were started late yesterday afternoon and were completed this forenoon. The defense maintained the driver of the auto was as responsible for the accident as the traction company and charged that the driver did not use reasonable care in approaching the crossing where the accident occurred.

The account suit of the Southern Seed Company against James T. Irvine, Sr., and James T. Irvine Jr., was tried this morning and taken under advisement by Judge Sparks. The demand was $110.

A motion for a new trial has been filed by Hal Green in the ex parte proceedings brought by Voorhees Cavitt to repair a drain. In deciding the case Judge Sparks modified the assessments of the various property owners affected by the proposed drain and in his motion for a new trial Green alleges that his assessment is too high for the benefits to be derived from the drain.

Judge Sparks has appointed Raymond Springer of Connersville to act as judge in the suit of Pearl Short against Orbie Short. It is a petition to modify a decree, Mr. Short alleging that he is unable to pay the amount set out in the decree for the support of his divorced wife. Judge Sparks was council in this case and appointed the special judge for this reason.

Elmer Humes was appointed guardian for Charles A. Caldwell and gave bond in the sum of $500. The petition for a guardian was filed by John C. Hiner and was acted favorably on by the court.

MAINTAINS ITS POSITION

Allied Line is Straightened Out,
French Assert.

(By United Press.)

Paris, May 5.—The fighting for possession of the positions dominated by Ypres continue without lull night and day. Artillery and infantry encounters followed each other and both sides are being heavily reinforced. The allied line has now been straightened out, the war office says, and all of the new positions are being well maintained.

The teachers of St. Paul's M. E. Sunday school will meet at the parsonage tonight. The Rev. A. D. Batchelor will lead the Bible study and Superintendent Leonard Clark will have charge of the business session. A full attendance of all teachers and officers is desired.

The Advantage of Royal Blood

By EUNICE BLAKE

The village of Queen Anne on the south Atlantic coast was named for the queen who was on the throne of England when the place was settled. A natural son of King Charles II. fitted out the expedition that made a village on what was then an uninhabited ocean shore. He came out himself, and his progeny now mingled with that of the other settlers. The consequence was that at the middle of the nineteenth century every inhabitant of Queen Anne could boast that he had royal blood in his veins.

Notwithstanding the aristocratic atmosphere of the place, nearly all the men as soon as they became old enough to strike out for themselves left for more active regions, leaving the women behind them. Occasionally some persons who desired a restful place to live would settle in Queen Anne, but after staying there some time, finding that none of the residents called on them, moved away. The consequence of this considerable going and inconsiderable coming was that, in time, the village was reduced to several hundred maiden ladies, all of royal blood.

One of those persons who had attempted to make a home in Queen Anne was a lady named Rutledge, from the state of Alabama. She was an invalid, and her physician recommended her to change her residence to the seashore. Her husband was obliged to make a trip to Europe and left home the day his wife started for Queen Anne, he going to New York for the purpose of crossing the ocean.

Mrs. Rutledge, who was a ladylike woman, alone and needing attention, was dismayed to find that, not having royal blood in her veins like the others, she was left out in the cold by the citizens of Queen Anne. She remained there, however, till her husband returned to America, then joined him at their old home in Alabama, where she died only a few weeks after their reunion.

One day a gentleman aged forty, well bred and apparently having plenty of money, went to Queen Anne, looked over the place, expressed himself pleased with it and gave out that he intended to settle there. The ladies of the place soon learned that the newcomer was a widower. In a place divested of men the matter of royal blood when an unmarried man was considered suddenly ceased to be of overweening importance. Every maiden of marriageable age was in a flutter. Every maiden dived into old chests to get out finery that had been brought from England long before that she might modernize it and make use of it to catch the widower.

The stranger had not been in Queen Anne a week before it was learned that he was indisposed. Miss Chalmondelay, who lived opposite his house, first became aware of this fact and hastened to send over delicacies. The news spread down the broad street on either side of which the village was built, and everybody, even to the uttermost end of the town, sent broth or jelly or fruit or some other delicacy to the invalid.

Had he consumed all he received he would have soon died of overeating, but it is questionable if he ate any of it. His servants certainly had such a feast as never before. The invalid recovered and found an accumulation of cards bearing the names of the donors of the delicacies that had been sent him, which filled a sizable wicker basket. As soon as he was able he began calling on the ladies who had favored him and did not cease till he had thanked every one of them in person.

This required time, but when finished the stranger had a calling acquaintance with every lady in Queen Anne. Some were very old and some very young. These he favored but once. Those of a marriageable age he made a list of, and there was not a day or an evening that he did not make as many calls as the hours would admit. It was evident to every woman in the village that he was looking for a wife, and every unmarried woman was hopeful.

What the stranger said to these ladies, what hopes he excited in each heart, never became common property, though there was a good deal of speculation as to what fortunate spinster would secure the prize. At one time it would appear after the bee had been buzzing for awhile on a single flower that he was about to alight, but the very next day he would be seen seeking honey from a different source.

One morning Miss Chalmondelay on rising looked between the slats at the house opposite. The doors and windows were closed, and the premises seemed deserted. That day each and every marriageable woman received a note, which read as follows:

I have decided that since there is no royal blood in my veins it is not seemly I should unite with the descendant of a king.

These notes were signed "Rutledge." No one could explain what the stranger meant by his strange conduct till one of them discovered that this was the name of the invalid lady who had recently been among them.

For a time each recipient kept her secret, but one after another finally told, and the whole thing came out. Then they understood that they had one and all been punished for their heartlessness to the wife of the man they had hoped to catch.

WORK OF POLICE WOULD IMPROVE

Indianapolis Department Believes Every City Should Use Bertillion System of Identifying

IS NOT VERY COMPLICATED

Expensive Equipment Is Not Needed To Carry On Work, According To Bert Perrott.

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, May 5.—The announcement from Columbus, Ind. that the police department there was preparing to install the Bertillion system of identifying and keeping permanent records of criminals and suspects gladdened the hearts of "crook chasers" in this city. There is no reason, they said, why every city of ten thousand or more inhabitants in Indiana should not join the list of those using scientific means of identification. The work of the police in Indiana cities would be made much more effective, they said.

Cities in Indiana now using the Bertillion system are Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Terre Haute, Lafayette, Evansville, Gary, Michigan City, and Jeffersonville, according to Bert Perrott the Bertillion expert attached to the local police force.

Perrott said that the expensive equipment in use here would not be needed in the smaller cities, but that a camera and cards for the finger prints, with some filing system, would serve the purpose. He said an efficient member of the police force in any city could be trained to take up the scientific identification work.

When a suspect is arraigned in the local police court, he is walked across the hall to Perrott's office and "mugged." He is then measured down to the crook of his finger, and the color of his hair and eyes, his weight and his general appearance are noted down. His finger prints are then taken. With this data, Bert Perrott is ready to classify the supposed crook, run through his records and determine whether he has a "past."

If for any reason Perrott is unable to identify the suspect, he is pretty sure to get aid from one of the other offices, such as the bureau of identification at Washington, or the Bertillion offices in Chicago, Louisville or Cincinnati. The results are about 125,000 pictures in the rogues gallery at Chicago, while Indianapolis has about 15,000. While Perrott is working through his records, Uncle Sam is hurrying his photos and measurements of the newly-arrived suspect to the police in other cities. With every aggressive city in Indiana equipped with a scientific system of identification, the yegg and express car bandit would stand small chance of getting off once he was apprehended.

NEW ARMY CAPTAIN.

Captain and Mrs. N. A. Tharp arrived today to begin their work at the local corps of the Salvation army, replacing Captain and Mrs. Sparks, who have gone to Washington, Ind., on account of the critical illness of Mrs. Sparks. The new leaders will hold their welcome meeting at the South Pearl street church Thursday evening at 7:30. They have been working under Ensign Purdue at Bloomington, Ind.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY.

(By United Press.)

Lima, O., May 5.—"I'm your long lost husband, H. W. Trexler," said a man to Florence Makin, 20, on the street the other night. "I've been living in Allentown, Pa., for 3 years, since I deserted you." "Uh huh, mebbe!" replied Florence, "but you gotta show me." Florence had lost a husband by desertion, but sort of forgot how he looked, she said. She put on a man's makeup and followed the "suspect," shading him for several days. "Not him," she says.

MUNICIPAL SALOON MAKES $1,000 A MONTH.

Lemmon, S. D., May 4. If business keeps up for the next two months as it has since last July Lemmon's municipal saloon will have contributed approximately $12,000 toward the schools and municipal improvements. The monthly profit of Lemmon's one saloon is $1,000 a month.

Before the last law limiting the number of saloons per capita through out the state Lemmon with a population of 1,255 inhabitants, had 8 saloons. Competition was keen and to make their respective saloons "attractive" some of them became the lowest manner of dives. When the per capita law was passed, Lemmon was allowed two saloons. There was intense rivalry for the two licenses. A proposition that the city go into the saloon business was put to a vote and failed.

Then the Lemmon Civic Association was formed after the city last spring adopted the commission form of government. The association included men of many different walks of life and business. Ministers were among the membership. The association was given a saloon license. A manager, one of the strongest prohibition workers in the city was appointed. He receives no salary. The two barkeepers receive such good salaries that graft of any kind is eliminated. A blacklist contains the names of persons who cannot buy liquor here. Patrons who once show a disposition to look even one time too frequently into the cup that cheers are blacklisted. Known drunkards may not enter the saloon; neither may persons whose families are known to be in want. Mayor B.R. Watt is one of the strongest boosters of Lemmon's municipal saloon.

"Since the saloon started last July," said Mayor Watts, "it has given satisfactory results from every point of view. When we had eight saloons here you can readily imagine what element dominated our politics. We have eliminated nearly all of the factional fighting and are all now working for the best interests of our city. We have practically no drunkenness in Lemmon. Certainly no man has become a drunkard in Lemmon since the municipal saloon started. I would sure recommend it as being far above private ownership."

VOTES "DRY" FIRST ELECTION EVER HELD

Hartford City Casts Majority of 101 Out of Total of 1,333 Against Saloons.

CITY "WET" SINCE 1842

Hartford City, Ind., May 5.—This city voted "dry" in yesterday's option election by an unofficial majority of 101. The total vote was 1,629 as against 1,333 in the last mayoralty election. The "drys" polled 865 and the "wets" 764.

In 1909 the city retained the saloons under the county local option law by 134. The vote was got out early, more than two-thirds being polled at noon. There was little trouble at the polls, few challenges being made, and there was only one arrest. The ringing of church bells announced the victory.

So far as history is recorded this is the first time that Hartford City has been "dry" since 1842.

"No whiskey was sold in Hartford City in 1842," says an old county history.

The vote was the heaviest ever cast in a city election, being 326 greater than for mayor in 1913. Fifteen saloons will go out of business within ninety days.

In placing credit for the victory the "drys" give great praise to Evangelist Bob Jones who conducted a four weeks revival in this city last February.

Not Conducive to Respect.

Terre Haute can not refrain from breaking into print. There seems to be something in the air that is conducive to publicity. Now comes the city council and causes itself to be held up to ridicule by its improper and disrespectful attitude displayed toward a resolution from the Woman's Council of Terre Haute, asking that when the time comes the common council choose a mayor to fill the vacancy caused by Mayor Donn M. Roberts impeachment by a preferential election, or by choosing some man free from political entanglements and who has the recommendation of the people.

According to reports from Terre Haute, the things which transpired at the council meeting when the resolution was read were anything but that which would inspire the respect of the people in its governing body. The president of the council is reported to have said in a loud voice: "Thanks! Thanks! Why, I won't even act on your motion, Mr. Moninger (referring to a motion instructing the city clerk to write the women of the city and thank them for the interest they were taking in the city's affairs). I guess the safest way in this matter is to leave it dead and gone. If this council hasn't brains enough, it will not have to go to skirts to get it."

What is there about the city of Terre Haute that breeds contempt for woman and causes the president of its common council to refer to them as "skirts"? Apparently, the proper respect for womanhood is lacking.

Public Spiritiveness.

The community as a whole is indebted to the committee of five men who gave freely of their time and talents to prepare the statistics required by the Dixie Highway commission on all proposed routes for the highway. The extended report required some labor and skill and the committee is entitled to a vote of thanks for this display of public spiritedness which makes communities grow and better places in which to live. The bare fact alone that the committee did something to help Rushville by doing all it could to locate the Dixie Highway should not be considered within itself, because before anything of that sort can be accomplished, there must be the proper feeling of home pride and the desire to do something for the good of the whole, which precludes all selfish interests.

In the absence of an official statement, may we be allowed to presume that the receivership proceedings for the United States Board and Paper company of Carthage is due to the psychological depression? If the receivership were psychological instead of actual, it would not be so bad.

COUNTY DEPOSIT ON THE INCREASE

Monthly Statement of County Treasurer Shows $126,788.48 More in April Than in March.

IS DUE TO SPRING PAYMENT

Interest is Also Much Larger Than Received in Many Months on Account of Heavier Deposits.

The county had a total of $352,373.54 on deposit with the various banks and trust companies of the county on May 1. This is shown in the monthly statement of the county treasurer to the board of finance. This sum is $126,788.48 greater than the previous month. This is accounted for by the fact that the spring payment of taxes came in at this time and was deposited in the different banks and trust companies.

The interest received on this sum was $423.90. This is the largest sum of interest received in several months. The interest for the month of March was $380.20. The settlement with the state will be made May 25 and this sum will be cut down considerably for this month.

The amounts on deposit in the various banks and trust companies at the close of business May 1 was as follows:

Rush Co. Nat'l.	$75,712.01
Rushville National	59,419.26
Peoples National	63,435.46
Peoples Loan & Trust	24,230.68

HOOSIER HISTORY

(Prepared by the United Press From Records in State Library.)

Growing sentiment against laxity in efforts to reform incorrigible boys swept Indiana in the year of 1866 and the result was that the Reform School (now known as the Indiana Boys' School) was established within a few months after the session of the legislature in 1867. Following this, in 1873, a Woman's Prison and Girl's School was built in Indianapolis. In 1907 the Girl's School was transferred to Clermont, Indiana and made a separate institution.

WANTS PAY FOR SEWER HE PUT IN

Ben A. Cox Represents to City Council That he Has Not Been Rebated For Money Spent.

IS REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Report of Superintendent Mahin Shows That General Inspection of City Plant Was Made.

The city council had a lengthy discussion on the North Perkins street sewer question last night. Some time ago the council ordered the sewer disconnected unless some taps were paid for. George W. Young appeared before the council representing Ben A. Cox.

Back in 1912 Mr. Cox and Joe Lakin constructed that part of the sewer north of Eleventh street in the Stewart & Tompkins addition. The sewer has become a part of the city system. Mr. Cox paid for the sewer and expected to be rebated by the other users. Several taps were made that were never paid for and he wants the city to make some kind of an arrangement for collecting the money.

Mr. Cox has something like $140 coming to him on the sewer. The extension was made under order of the old council. It is understood that the old council agreed to pay Mr. Cox for putting in the sewer just as fast as any of the property owners connected with it but so far he has received no money. Mr. Young wanted the city to tax the property owners there and collect for the sewer. The matter was finally referred to the sewer committee, with the city attorney added. They are to report at next meeting and it is believed a satisfactory agreement will be reached.

There was nothing of great importance before the council last night. The treasurer's reports for the months of March and April were read to the council and ordered referred to the finance committee.

The sale of the old sprinkling wagon was left to the street committee, with the street commissioner added. The city has two offers for the old wagon and the committee will sell it to the best bidder.

The report of Superintendent Mahin showed that the big reservoir had been cleaned and cemented and a general inspection of water plant made. All of the necessary repairs have been completed that the plant is in good condition. It was stated to the council that there were still about 200 water meters to be installed. Boiler inspectors reported that all three of the boilers at the water plant were in good condition.

SENDS REPORT TO COMMISSION

double arch wooden bridge over Big Flat Rock just south of Rushville, which is a fine piece of work, and except the steel bridge over Little Flatrock between Rushville and New Salem. These bridges however are in first-class condition at all times. All the rest of the bridges are concrete.

4th. Streams without bridges and conditions of fords. Answer, None. 5th. What arrangements have been made for putting these roads in first-class condition and maintaining them? Character of roads to be built in every particular. Answer. All of the route through this County is a free turn pike as above described, and we are enclosing resolutions showing that Commissioners will maintain this road at all times, and keep it in fine condition. (See resolutions of the Dixie Highway Commissioners.)

6th. What guarantee will be furnished that road will be built as represented? Answer. The road is already built and will be maintained as per record of County Commissioners.

7th. At what date can road be ready for dedication? Answer. At any time the Commissioner would so desire.

8th. population to be served, tributaries, feeders, historical attractions and such other data as advocates may wish to submit. Answer. Population to be served in Rush County would be about 20,000, with Rushville having a population of about 6,000. Tributaries and feeders would be excellent both through the north, south, east and west, as Rush County prides itself as having the best system of roads of any county in the State of Indiana. Historical attractions. (See description of Highway below.)

9th. Copies to each member. Answer. We are sending a copy of this report to each member of the Highway Commission.

Description of Highway from Indianapolis, Indiana, to Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Dixie Highway as described to pass through Rush County, Indiana, comes straight out of Indianapolis on Washington street to Emerson Avenue in Irvington, thence south about one-half (½) mile to the old Brookville and Indianapolis turn pike, from this point the road is straight for about forty (40) miles to Rushville, Indiana. During this forty (40) miles there is not a railroad to cross and only one traction line. The road is a free turn pike and in very fine condition, and passes through several small towns and a very beautiful farming community. Leaving Rushville the road bears southeast toward the old town of Andersonville where it leaves Rush county.

We have in Rush county the home of old Blue Ball, and we have raised more fine horses than any county in the state. We are first in production of corn, and second in wheat. As a natural attraction we have the only Crane roost in the northern part of the United States. General P. A. Hackleman and Admiral George Brown were born and reared in Rush County.

After leaving the rich and fertile fields of Rush County, the road continues in a southeasterly direction to a point near Laurel, Indiana, where one gets his first view of the White Water Valley, which has been termed the Switzerland of America. This Valley has become famous for automobile traffic—it has a fine free turn pike, good bridges and no heavy grades. The road continues in a south easterly direction following the Valley to Brookville—after leaving Brookville you follow the Valley to the town of Harrison, Ohio, and from there on a very fine road to Cincinnati.

For beautiful houses, fertile fields, and where nature has certainly outdone herself with grandeur, this route could not help but appeal to automobilists who travel not only for speed but for pleasure.

Brookville and Franklin County is the birthplace of many of United States greatest statesmen and soldiers. Eddes, the great engineer who built the first bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis and who afterwards constructed the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, was born here.

Adams and Steele have made the White Water Valley famous from their landscape paintings, and among all this beauty and grandeur, you have a first-class road.

Yours Very Truly,

A. L. STEWART.

FAST TEAM IS COMING SUNDAY

Cambridge City, of the Indiana State League Will be the Attraction
Against the Rushers.

ROOTERS TO ACCOMPANY TEAM

Fans Will Get Line on All League Teams as They Will all be in Action Sunday.

The Cambridge City team of the Indiana State league will be the attraction Sunday afternoon at Edgewater park. The game will be an exhibition contest but will serve to give the fans a line on the strength of the two teams.

The fans around the circuit will also get a line on all the teams in the league as a result of Sunday's games. All six teams of the league will be in action Sunday. Newcastle will play at Richmond; Perkins-Campbell at Connersville and Cambridge City in Rushville. The outcome of all these contests is watched with interest.

The Rushers will have no easy sailing in the game Sunday, according to the dope. Dr. W. R. Littell, of Cambridge City, states that some change in the lineup will be made as they are not quite satisfied with their team. This means that the Cambridge City backers are determined to have a real ball team and the fans can expect a classy game.

A large crowd of rooters is coming from Cambridge City for the game and a lively time is expected. Owing to a large number of visitors that will be in the city for the Knights of Columbus initiation a large crowd is expected at the game. In order to accommodate the visitors that desire to attend the ball game and the initiation the game will be called at 2:15 o'clock instead of 2:30 o'clock. In starting the game fifteen minutes early it will be completed in time for other things connected with the K. of C. celebration.

Manager Davidson will use his regular lineup against Cambridge City and will make a special effort to cop the game. Cambridge City always has a good ball club and Rushville will have to step some to win. Dr. Littell and others interested in the club expect to win from Rushville and the game will be a severe test for the Rushers, coming as it does this early in the season.

Vordenburg will be opposed on the mound of Mollenkamp, who when right will cause any team a lot of trouble. President Ritter has not yet made his umpire assignments for Sunday's games.

INSANE INMATES IN TENTS

This Condition Necessary Because Of Fire At Logansport.

(By United Press.)

Logansport, Ind., May 5.—With army tents housing many of the less dangerous insane inmates of the Northern Indiana Hospital for the Insane and with many others in temporary headquarters in the dining rooms the regular routine of Long-cliff asylum was approximated today. These conditions must prevail for years—until another legislature can appropriate money to rebuild the $25,000 building that was recently burned. The state institutional fund is exhausted. Because of the general policy of the state not insure against fire nothing was said to the state from this fire.

PLAYER LIMIT HURTS GIANTS

McGraw Has Already Lost One Good Pitcher as Shown by Recent Performance of Chalmers.

NOW PROPERTY OF PHILLIES

Was Taken South With Team and Then Sent There—Shows up Giants in Two Hit Game.

BY HAL SHERIDAN.
(Written for United Press.)

New York, May 5.—There is fire in the eyes of John McGraw and anger in the heart of Harry Hamstead and John Foster over the twenty-one player rule that was forced upon the National league this season with malice aforethought, or otherwise, but mainly through the instigation of Barney Dreyfuss. None of the above mentioned trio ever thought enough of the player limit to make it the cause of a general celebration, and they like it still less since the recent performance of pitcher Chalmers of Philadelphia.

For two years this same Chalmers vainly attempted to break into the game as a regular Giant. Last fall he went out during practice sessions and showed Scout Kinsella a lot of things that made the ivory-comber real joyous, but when Kinsella would have impressed his own valuation of Chalmers on his boss, he succeeded as rapidly as a German getting the English viewpoint on the cause of the Biggest Thing in all the World.

Hence, when the twenty-one player rule forced McGraw to look around for someone to let go, the "Little Napoleon" fixed his orb on Chalmers, when he had taken South this spring after every one else refused to give the youngster a chance. The New York B. B. club, Inc. paid all the training expenses and, to show his appreciation, Chalmers worked hard and got in excellent shape. Chalmers regretted leaving the United States for Philadelphia but he went with gratitude over the fact that he still remained a big leaguer.

His next appearance was in New York in a Philly uniform. The result of his spring training showed in the box score which recorded that the Giants made two hits and that seven of them fanned. And New York is sadly in want of pictures! We ventured to predict that there will be no twenty-one player rule next year. A number of other National league teams have felt the pinch of the same regulation and these who figured that it might cause the quality of the baseball played by Tener's organization to deteriorate were not much more wrong than those who thought Germany had a great army.

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I want to thank you a thousand times for the wonderful good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered very much from a female trouble. I had bearing down pains, was irregular and at times could hardly walk across the room. I was unable to do my housework or attend to my baby I was so weak. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me a world of good, and now I am strong and healthy, can do my work and tend my baby. I advise all suffering women to take it and get well as I did."—Mrs. FANNIE COOPER, R.F.D., Bridgeton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnosis and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer, Macdougall. Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped to his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

"THE HIDDEN HANDS."

CHAPTER VI.

Sanford Quest and Lenora stood side by side upon the steps of the courthouse, waiting for the automobile, which had become momentarily entangled in a string of vehicles. A little crowd of people were elbowing their way out on to the sidewalk. The faces of most of them were still shadowed by the three hours of tense drama from which they had just emerged. Quest, who had lit a cigar, watched them curiously.

"No need to go into court," he remarked. "I could have told you, from the look of these people, that Macdougall had escaped the death sentence. They have paid their money—or rather their time, and they have been cheated of the one supreme thrill."

"Imprisonment for life seems terrible enough," Lenora whispered, shuddering.

"Can't see the sense of keeping such a man alive myself," Quest declared, with purposeful brutality. "It was a cruel murder, fiendishly committed."

They were on the point of crossing the pavement toward the automobile when Quest felt a touch upon his shoulder. He turned and found Lord Ashleigh standing by his side. Quest glanced towards Lenora.

"Run and get in the car," he whispered. "I will be there in a moment." "I would not have stopped you just now, Mr. Quest," said Lord Ashleigh. "but my brother is very anxious to renew his acquaintance with you. I think you met years ago."

Sanford Quest held out his hand to the man who had been standing a little in the background. Lord Ashleigh turned towards him.

"This is Mr. Quest, Edgar. You may remember my brother—Professor Ashleigh—as a man of science, Quest? He has just returned from South America."

The two shook hands, curiously diverse in type, in expression, in all the appurtenances of manhood.

"I am very proud to make your acquaintance again, professor," Quest said. "Glad to know, too, that you hadn't forgotten me."

"My dear sir," the professor declared, as he released the other's hand with seeming reluctance, "I have thought about you many times. Your doings have always been of interest to me."

"I am sorry," Quest remarked, "that our first meeting here should be under such distressing circumstances."

The professor nodded gravely. "If you'll excuse me, professor," said Quest, "I think I must be getting along. We shall meet again, I trust."

"One moment," the professor begged, eagerly. "Tell me, Mr. Quest—I want your honest opinion. What do you think of my ape?"

"Of your what?" Quest inquired dubiously.

"Of my anthropoid ape which I have just sent to the museum. You know my claim? But perhaps you would prefer to postpone your final decision until after you have examined the skeleton itself."

A light broke in upon the criminologist.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "For the moment, professor, I couldn't follow you. You are talking about the skeleton of the ape which you brought home from South America, and which you have presented to the museum here?"

"Naturally," the professor assented, with mild surprise. "To what else? I am stating my case, Mr. Quest, in the North American Review next month; I may tell you, however, as a fellow scientist, the great and absolute truth. My claim is incontestable. My skeleton will prove to the world, without a doubt, the absolute truth of Darwin's great theory."

"That so?"

"You must go and see it," the professor insisted. "You shall be permitted a special examination."

"Very kind of you," Quest murmured. "We shall meet again soon, I hope," the professor concluded cordially. "Good-morning, Mr. Quest!"

The two men shook hands and Quest took his seat by Lenora's side in the automobile. The professor rejoined his brother.

They entered the taxicab and were driven almost in silence to the professor's home—a large, rambling old house, situated in somewhat extensive but ill-kept grounds on the outskirts of New York. The Englishman glanced around him, as they passed up the drive, with an expression of disapproval.

"A more untidy looking place than yours, Edgar, I never saw," he declared. "Your grounds have become a jungle. Don't you keep any gardeners?"

"I keep other things," he said serenely. "There is something in my garden which would terrify your nice Scotch gardeners into fits if they found their way here to do a little tidying up. Come into the library and I'll give you one of my choice cigars. Here's Craig waiting to let us in. Any news, Craig?"

"Nothing has happened, sir," he replied. "The telephone is ringing in the study now, though."

"I will answer it myself," the professor declared, bustling off.

The professor took up the receiver from the telephone. His "Hello!" was mild and inquiring. He had no doubt that the call was from some admiring disciple. The change in his face as he listened, however, was amazing.

"George," he gasped, "the greatest tragedy in the world has happened! My ape is stolen!"

His brother looked at him blankly.

"Your ape is stolen?" he repeated.

"The skeleton of my anthropoid ape," the professor continued, his voice growing alike in sadness and firmness. "It is the curator of the museum who is speaking. They have just opened the box. It has lain for two days in an anteroom. It is empty!"

Lord Ashleigh muttered something a little vague. The theft of a skeleton scarcely appeared to his unscientific mind to be a realizable thing. The professor turned back to the telephone.

"Mr. Francis," he said, "I cannot talk to you. I can say nothing. I shall come to you at once. I am on the point of starting. Your news has overwhelmed me."

He laid down the receiver. He looked around him like a man in a nightmare.

"The taxicab is waiting, sir," Craig reminded him.

"That is most fortunate," the professor pronounced. "I remember now that I had no change with which to pay him. I must go back. Look after my brother. And, Craig, telephone at once to Mr. Sanford Quest. Ask him to meet me at the museum in twenty minutes. Tell him that nothing must stand in the way. Do you hear?"

The taxicab man drove off, glad enough to have a return fare. In about half an hour's time the professor strode up the steps of the museum and hurried into the office. There was a little crowd of officials there, whom the curator at once dismissed. He rose slowly to his feet. His manner was grave and bewildered.

"Professor," he said, "we will waste no time in words. Look here!"

He threw open the door of an anteroom behind his office. The apartment was unfurnished except for one or two chairs. In the middle of the uncarpeted floor was a long wooden box from which the lid had just been pried.

"Yesterday, as you know from my note," the curator proceeded, "I was away. I gave orders that your case should be placed here that I myself should enjoy the distinction of opening it. An hour ago I commenced the task. That is what I found."

The professor gazed blankly at the empty box.

"Nothing left except the smell," a voice from the open doorway remarked.

They glanced around. Quest was standing there, and behind him Lenora. The professor welcomed them eagerly.

"This is Mr. Quest, the great criminologist," he explained to the curator. Quest strolled thoughtfully around the room, glancing out of each of the windows in turn. He kept close to the wall, and when he had finished he drew out a magnifying glass from his pocket and made a brief examination of the box. Then he asked a few questions of the curator, pointed out one of the windows to Lenora and whispered a few directions to her. She at once produced what seemed to be a foot rule from the bag which she was carrying, and hurried into the garden.

"A little invention of my own for measuring footprints," Quest explained. "Not much use here, I am afraid."

Quest stood over the box for a moment or two and looked once more out of the window. Presently Lenora returned. She carried in her hand a small object, which she brought silently to Quest. He glanced at it in perplexity. The professor peered over his shoulder.

"It is the little finger!" he cried—"the little finger of my ape!"

Quest held it away from him critically.

"From which hand?" he asked. "The right hand."

Quest examined the fastenings of the window before which he paused during his previous examination. He turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"See you later, Mr. Ashleigh," he concluded laconically.

A newsboy thrust a paper at them. Quest glanced at the headlines. Lenora clutched at his arm. Together they read it in great black type:

CHAPTER VII.

The windows of Mrs. Rheinholdt's town house were ablaze with light. A crimson druggist stretched down the steps to the curbstone. A long row of automobiles stood waiting. Through the wide-flung door was visible a pleasant impression of flowers and light and luxury. In the nearer of the two large reception rooms Mrs. Rheinholdt herself, a woman dark, handsome and in the prime of life, was standing to receive her guests. By her side was her son, whose twenty-first birthday was being celebrated.

"I wonder whether that professor of yours will come?" she remarked, as the stream of incoming guests slackened for a moment.

"He hates receptions," the boy replied, "but he promised he'd come. I never thought, when he used to drill science into us at the lectures, that he was going to be a tremendous big pot."

Mrs. Rheinholdt's plump finger toyed for a moment complacently with the diamonds which hung from her neck.

"You can never tell in a world like this," she murmured.

"Here he is, mother!" the young man exclaimed suddenly. "Good old boy! I thought he'd keep his word."

Mrs. Rheinholdt assumed her most encouraging and condescending smile as she held out both hands to the professor.

"It is perfectly sweet of you, professor," Mrs. Rheinholdt declared.

Mrs. Rheinholdt breathed a sigh of relief as she greeted her new arrivals.

The professor made himself universally agreeable in a mild way, and his presence created even more than the sensation which Mrs. Rheinholdt had hoped for. In her desire to show him ample honor she seldom left his side.

"I am going to take you into my husband's study," she suggested, later on in the evening. "He has some specimens of beetles—"

"Beetles," the professor declared, with some excitement, "occupied precisely two months of my time while abroad. By all means, Mrs. Rheinholdt!"

"We shall have to go quite to the back of the house," she explained, as she led him along the darkened passages.

The professor smiled acquiescently. His eyes rested for a moment upon her necklace.

"You must really permit me, Mrs. Rheinholdt," he exclaimed, "to admire your wonderful stones. I am a judge of diamonds, and those three or four in the center are, I should judge, unique."

She held them out to him. The professor laid the end of the necklace gently in the palm of his hand and examined them through a horn-rimmed eyeglass.

"They are wonderful," he murmured, "wonderful! Why—"

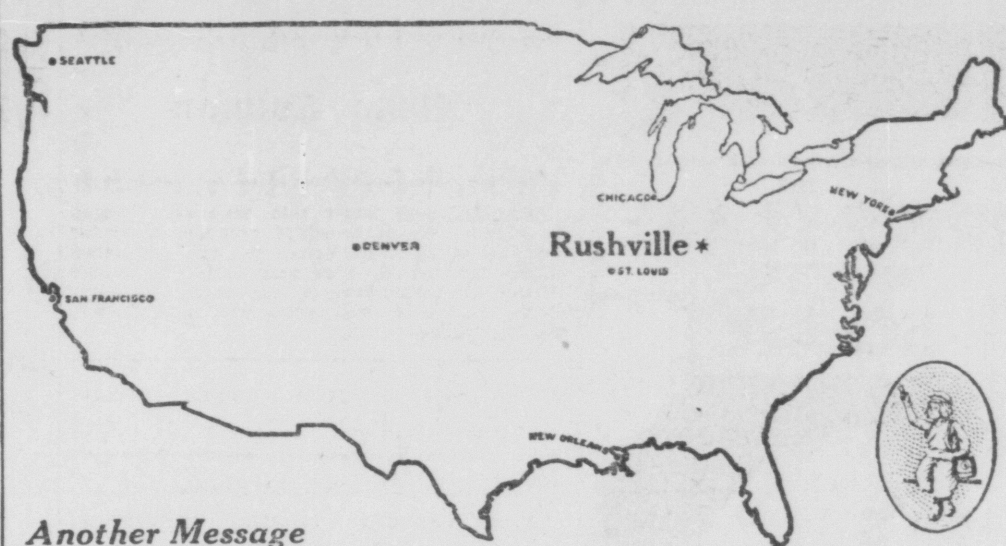

He turned away a little abruptly. They had reached the back of the house and a door from outside had just been opened. A man had crossed the threshold with a coat over his arm and was standing now looking at them.

"How extraordinary!" the professor remarked. "Is that you, Craig?"

"Yes, sir," he replied. "There is a rainstorm, so I ventured to bring your mackintosh."

"Very thoughtful," the professor murmured approvingly. "I have a weakness," he went on, turning to his hostess, "for always walking home after an evening like this. In the daytime I am content to ride. At night I have the fancy always to walk."

To be continued.

To the Business Men of Rushville

Business fights shy of dead towns. A sure sign of a dead one is the lack of local pride. People who live in a live, prosperous town show it. Their stores are attractive, their streets clean, their homes are well painted.

Nothing shows a lack of pride, a lack of prosperity, like paint-hungry buildings. Let's paint up. As the most durable and economical paint, we recommend

NOW PRACTICALLY WIPED OUT

Believes Many Farmers Sell Their Timber Too Cheap—One Case Where Money Was Lost.

BY BURTON K. STANDISH
(Written for United Press.)

Washington, May 5.—"The Quaker of Politics," A. Mitchell Palmer has retired from politics.

Ha, you say, no place for a Quaker! But you are wrong. Quakers ought to be in politics, says Mr. Palmer; just as all good citizens ought to be in politics. Palmer ought to know for he has seen considerable politics in the less than 43 years of his life. After three terms as Congressman from Pennsylvania, he made the race for U. S. Senator against Boies Penrose, obtaining thereby more experience perhaps, than the average politician obtains in a lifetime. He was among the most active of Wilson's managers at the Baltimore convention and is chairman of the executive campaign committee of the Democratic national committee.

He became judge of the U. S. Court of Claims May 1. Friend Palmer believes that idealism and politics need not seriously conflict. "The idealist must go into politics," he said the other day, "practical politics". He must accept public place. Not merely that, he must seek it. The maxim, "The office should seek the man," is very pretty in theory, but it will not work out in practice. While you wait for the office to seek you it is filled by the man who sought it. The man who is modest, sensitive and diffident had better overcome the handicap of his nature before he undertakes to right the wrongs of the world. He may be a reformer, but he never will reform anything until he has become self-confident, unmoved by slander, and aggressive.

"Just how far the idealist may go in accepting the methods of practical politics to accomplish his purpose is a difficult question. He may go so far that the public will doubt his sincerity and judge him by his methods rather than by his avowed purpose. Because his methods bear close resemblance to those which have carried unholy causes to temporary victory, he will find himself under suspicion and put upon the defensive at the very time when all his powers should be employed in offensive attack.

"Or, he may err in the other direction, with as fatal results. If he seizes the practical methods of political work, frowns upon organization and refuses to employ the weapons most feared by practical men in the enemy's camp, he is liable to wake up after the battle to find all efforts have been wasted on an elaborate organized, drilled, and trained to stand pat and sit tight in the midst of the shooting and the tumult, machine.

"He should go just as far as it is necessary to go to accomplish results, without sacrifice of principle or recession from ideal. As providence is on the side of the heaviest artillery, so political success is on the side of the best organization. The reformer who seizes the watch at the polls because he dirties his hands with practical work of the organization, may perchance have no higher ideals than the worker himself. The gravest error into which young men of high ideals and noble purposes are apt to fall is to hug the delusion and act on the theory that all practical organizations are operated for selfish and improper purposes, and that only the impractical, theoretical man can possibly be honest in political effort. They should make up their minds to accomplish their purpose through existing channels, instead of trying to carve other ways, long abandoned by practical men because leading nowhere.

"They should affiliate with the organization of party to whose principles they adhere, in precinct, ward, city and state and if after careful study they find that organization is being employed for purposes other than the common welfare, they should undertake to clean it from the bottom up, and make it what it ought to be—a powerful machine for the accomplishment of honest government. When they cannot accomplish within the organization what they conceived to be the true purpose of their political effort they are justified in protest by political action independent of party. The only man who is less patriotic than the man without a party is he who never will leave his party for any cause."

GOES IN JITNEY BUSINESS

Traction Company Takes Field in Richmond, Virginia.

(By United Press.)

Newcastle, Ind., May 5.—The Briscoe Automobile factory here is working full time turning out autos that will become jitney busses in Richmond, Va. In this case the jitneys will not fight street car company, but will be operated by the traction company itself. Rather than compete with the jitneys with street cars only the traction company has gone into the jitney business itself.

ONE WEAK SPOT

Many Rushville People Have a Weak Part and Too Often it's the Back

Many people have a weak spot. Too often it's a bad back. Twinges follow every sudden twist. Dull aching keeps up day and night.

Backache is often from weak kidneys.

In such cases a kidney medicine is needed.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

For backache and urinary ills. Good proof of merit in the following statement.

Hiram Whalen, R. R. No. 1, Circleville, Rushville, Township, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a fine remedy and we always keep them in the house. I had pains in my back that made it hard for me to straighten after stooping and my kidneys caused me a great deal of trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills stopped the pains and aches and regulated the kidney action."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Whalen had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo N. Y. (Advertisement.)

Selling Is MORE than Trading Stock for Money!

Selling is part of the scheme of business. Most anyone can sell once, but selling so you can create permanent customers is selling successfully. That is why we carry the large stock of buggies we have on our sample floor for prospective customers or purchasers to make their selections from. They don't have to take something they don't want, as we carry every style of buggy that there is a demand for. Then after the customer has made his selection from our stock we tell him exactly what the buggy is and it has to be just as we represent it or we make it that way. The customer takes no chances. He is sure to get just what he pays for. ONE sale reduces itself to a confidence game unless the buyer is perfectly satisfied. Satisfaction sends a customer away with a smile that won't come off. That is why our buggy business has grown. We have found out how to hold customers after we get them and every satisfied customer is bound to bring a new customer sooner or later. Right now our stock of buggies is complete and if you are needing a buggy come in and make your selection. We have the style you want and we would be glad to have you for one of our satisfied customers. We know you will be glad when you give us your vehicle business, so do it now.

Corn Plows--Steel Rollers

I still handle the Little Nation Corn Plow. This is the greatest plow on earth today—more of them used in Rush county than all the rest combined. Sold 90 of them in 1914 and I have 100 for 1915. I handle the Janesville Corn Plows, 2 rows. They are the finest finished goods in the city.

I have plenty of Steel Rollers—7 and 8 foot.
I have one Corn Planter left and I would sell it if I had a buyer.
I sold 15 of these planters.

I sell the best line of Galvanized Steel Tanks, Steel Troughs any size, Round Tanks Automatic Stock Fountains—no valves to get out of order. This fountain is the only one made that won't give you any trouble—the steel slide that has galvanized runners is the best that is on the market.

I have plenty and now is your time to get one worth the money, for I am going to sell them at a price that will sell them. I have most anything you want. Linseed Meal on hands. I have feed basket, steel rollers, 7 and 8 foot. Come and see what I have. I have the largest stock of goods in the city.

was not working when the war broke out, and the stress of 1907 might have been repeated. But the Aldrich act, he asserted made it possible for the banks to get all the money they needed.

He pointed to some of the disadvantages and advantages of the new law from the standpoint of the city bank. One of the latter, he declared, was that the city bank now has a definite place to discount. It also makes it possible, he continued, for the city bank to do business without collateral or commercial paper. The law will probably enable them, he declared, to do away with debit balances. It also may reduce exchanges, he added, and is far reaching in its comfortable assurance it gives the banker.

Some of the disadvantages to the country bank through the new law, he asserted, were the loss of exchange, and the likelihood that the collectable balance with the federal reserve bank may be larger than anticipated, which will make necessary a larger reserve and a consequent loss of interest. The last advantage, he said, was that the country bankers will have to carry accounts to cover their collections.

Some of the advantages, he declared, were that the new law provides a place to apply for credit or currency. This ought to appeal to country bankers more than city bankers, he added. Elimination of the dread of discounting was also another advantage he referred to.

Mr. Watson asked what he could talk about before a crowd of bankers when he was called on. He said he might get a crowd of borrowers together and incite a revolution. Mr. Watson declared he was immensely interested in that part of the new banking law referring to overdrafts. Mr. Watson declared that it was a good thing for business men to get together because if they do not get together there will be no business to protect. He asserted that the time is coming when business must be unfettered and unshackled because there had been too much of the viewing of business with suspicion. He expressed the belief that there could be honest big business as well as honest little business, and that its honesty all depended not upon its size but upon its character.

Mr. Watson recited some stories that were very much to the point and was frequently applauded. Mr. Davis also had several timely stories that brought many outbursts of laughter from the bankers.

John W. McCordle, former member of the state board of tax commissioners, talked on "Taxation," pleading for uniformity in taxation.

Lewis M. Sexton, as chairman of group six, presided, and E. B. Thomas welcomed the visiting bankers here. His speech was most timely and well taken, and in a vein that made the visitors feel at home. His welcome was commented upon by other speakers.

The response of John P. Frenzel, Jr., of Indianapolis, president of the State Bankers association, was equally pleasant and conducive to arouse the feeling of good fellowship. After opening with the singing of "America," the Rev. C. M. Yocum of the Main Street Christian church, gave a short prayer. Following the address of welcome and response, the roll call was made, the report of the secretary heard and the nominating committee appointed.

GERMANS ARE MORE CONFIDENT TODAY SAYS SINKING WAS TREATY VIOLATION

Flags Flying and Bands Playing in Berlin as Regiment After Regiment Entains.

Latest American Note to Germany on Destruction of William P. Frye is Made Public.

THESE ARE STIRRING DAYS SUGGESTION NOT CONSIDERED

(By United Press.)

Berlin, (By Way of The Hague and London), May 5.—The Germans today are more confident than ever before that all efforts of her enemies to crush her has proved in vain. With a threefold offensive in Flanders, in Galicia and in northeast Russia being successfully prosecuted, there was a spirit of enthusiasm displayed here today in all circles that exceeded even the stirring days immediately following the outbreak of the war.

Flags were flying everywhere today, the imperial standards of Germany and Austria predominating, although there is a goodly showing of the Turkish crescent. Bands played as regiment after regiment passed through the city to entrain for the front.

(By United Press.)

Washington, May 5.—The latest American note to Germany on the case of the bark William P. Frye, sunk by a German raider, was made public by the state department today. The Fry's destruction was referred to as a "violation of treaty obligations imposed upon the Imperial German government under existing treaty stipulations between the United States and Prussia."

The United States, it was continued, will not consider the German suggestion that the legality of the ship's capture and destruction or the amount of indemnity he submitted to a prize court.

SUBMARINES WERE RUNNING AMUCK

Eleven British Trawlers Reported Sunk Yesterday and Today by German Sea Ship.

CREWS OF ALL ARE LANDED

(By United Press.)

London, May 5.—Eleven trawlers of the North Sea fishing fleet have been sunk in the North Sea by a sea-going German submarine with a faesimile of the iron cross painted on her conning tower. They are the Hector, Progress, Coquet, Iolanthe, Hero, Northwards and Bob White of Hull, and Grimsby. All of their crews are safe after an exciting experience in the open sea in small boats.

The fleet was fishing on Monday when suddenly the big German submarine appeared in their midst.

The submarine attack is designed to destroy the trawler fleet in the hope of preventing use by the admiralty of the fishing fleet for mine sweeping and to stop all fishing.

BANKERS ARE GUESTS HERE

Approximately 150 Are Entertained
With Chicken Dinner at Social Club After Session.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Next Meeting Will be Held in Newcastle—Federal Reserve Law is Discussed by Speaker.

Approximately one hundred and fifty bankers from fourteen eastern and southeastern Indiana counties were entertained here today on the occasion of the annual meeting of group six of the Indiana Bankers association.

The session began in the Princess theater at eleven o'clock and continued until shortly before one o'clock, when final adjournment was taken and bankers were escorted to the Social Club rooms, where a chicken dinner was served. A short cabaret entertainment by Miss Martha Hogsett and Jess Pugh was to follow the meal.

The only digression from the set program was a short speech by James E. Watson who came into the meeting a few minutes before it closed. The report of the nominating committee selecting the officers for the year and naming Newcastle for the next meeting place, was adopted by acclamation.

The principal speech of the meeting was delivered by T. J. Davis, vice-president of the First National bank, Cincinnati. He devoted himself, discussing the subject, "Modern Banking," almost exclusively to pointing out the advantages and disadvantages of the national banking act. His speech was read from manuscript and was largely technical in its nature.

John R. Millikan, assistant cashier of the Citizens State bank of Newcastle, was named chairman for the coming year and L. K. Tingley, cashier of the First National bank of Connersville, was elected secretary. A. L. Winship, president of the Rushville National bank, was selected as the member of the nominating committee. The new executive committee follows: A. E. Nowlin, president of the Dearborn National bank of Lawrenceburg; J. J. Ribbott, cashier of the Laurel bank; G. B. Russell, cashier of the First National bank of Hartsville; Adolph Cooper, cashier of the Farmers State bank of Middletown; Harry C. Morrison, cashier of the First National bank of Shelbyville.

At the outset, Mr. Davis said that his appearance here gave him opportunity to make his personal acknowledgement of his regard for Indiana bankers for their support of him when he tried to be elected as an official of the American Bankers association.

He said the matter pressing for solution now was whether the bankers should or should not join the intra-district associations under the federal reserve system. He asserted that under the old national banking laws there had been no means of bringing in new money in a crisis, except by one method.

Mr. Davis declared that had the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency law or the federal reserve system in effect, much of the financial distress of 1893 and 1907 could have been avoided. He said the enactment of the former law in 1908 enabled the banks to obtain money in emergencies other than through government bond securities.

It was fortunate, he said, that the old law (the Aldrich-Vreeland act) was kept on the statute books because the new federal reserve law

WEATHER MAN IS PROMISING FROST

Fruit Growers And Gardeners, However, Are Not Sure Whether It
Is A Promise Or A Threat

SOME DAMAGE MAY BE DONE

The weather man sent terror into the hearts of fruit growers and gardeners who planted early this spring when he said today that there might be frost "in the low places" tonight. The continued low and unseasonable temperatures for the last few days have caused fruit men and truck gardeners to be fearful of the future because vegetation is in such an advanced state that a frost of any sort is liable to do considerable damage.

The extremely warm weather in April brought fruit to such a stage that it is now in great danger of being seriously damaged. It is not thought likely, however, that the frost will seriously affect any of the farm crops. The only thing that prevented frost during the last nights, in the opinion of many, was the clouded skies. The temperature has been as low as forty degrees above zero.

Books of County Treasurer Show
But $1,677.22 of Spring Tax
Installment is Unpaid.

BELIEVE IT SMALLEST YET

Figures in the office of County Treasurer Williams show that only $1,677.22 remains unpaid in taxes on realty in Rush county from the spring payment of taxes. This is a rather remarkable figure and shows that there will be but a small amount of delinquent tax. The amount does not include poll tax unpaid.

A total of $280,005.38 was collected from the spring installment. The total on the last day was $22,044.05. The officials at the treasurers office are elated over the showing and believe that the amount remaining unpaid is the smallest in the history of the county. It was stated that a total of $320,000 was to be collected in taxes at the spring installment, but the officials did not take into consideration that $25,000 was to come out of this figure in road taxes that were worked out.

The amount remaining unpaid on realty by townships is as follows: Carthage corporation, $40.05; Ripley, $14.67; Posey, $94.50; Walker, $55.83; Orange, $86.76; Anderson, $129.88; Rushville, $252.10; Jackson, $25.78; Center, $156.39; Washington, $46.16; Glenwood, $12.81; Union, $112.82; Noble, $53.50; Richland, 108.74; Richland, $108.74; Rushville City, $487.23.

SENDS REPORT TO COMMISSION

Dixie Highway Committee For Rush
County Completes Work Gathering Data on Local Route.

CARE USED IN PREPARATION

No Feature is Overlooked, Including
Request That Historical Attractions be Mentioned.

The Dixie Highway commission of five members for Rush county has completed its report on the proposed route in Rush county and forwarded a copy to each of the fourteen members—two from each of seven states—of the Dixie Highway commission.

The Rush county committee spent considerable time at the task and answered all the questions asked by the commission fully and with diligent care and detail. They went into the historical feature and located some of the famous spots and pointed with pride to many of the things in Rush county history of which its residents are proud.

The committee made a careful survey of the whole route, giving the number of bridges and describing the condition of all the roads and setting forth just what the commission might expect from Rush county. The committee even went further. It described the road all the way from Indianapolis to the point where it leaves Rush county because there will be no committee west of Rush county to do this work since the proposed route does not pass through any county seat towns between here and Indianapolis. The report in full follows:

We beg leave to submit to you the following report with reference to the proposed Dixie Highway passing through Rush county, Indiana.

We note in your resolutions adopted at a meeting in Louisville, Ky., April 23d, 1915, you have asked for certain information, and we beg leave to report to you with reference to the highway in this county as follows:

1st. Mileage in Rush County, under the proposed route. Answer. 21.45/100 miles.

2d. Conditions of this road in mileage classified.

(a) Highly improved with hard surface. Answer, the entire length of the road.

(b) Gravel, etc. Answer, the 9 7/10 miles on west end consists of the very best of river gravel, mostly on stone foundation, and very finely maintained. Brick, 1 4/10 miles, being a smooth first class piece of work on concrete foundation, which passes from the outskirts of Rushville on the west through Rushville, and south on the Andersonville road to the little town called Circleville, from this point, for all the 10 35/100 miles to the southeast, road is macadam, and which is first-class in every respect. The County Commissioners are preparing the way to searify and roll this road and put it in a very fine condition.

(d) Grades and drainage. Answer. The grades and drains on the entire route are first-class, the road is well graded and no water stands on the side of the road or in the road through its entire length during heavy rains and there is no grade on its entire route that would be over 3 per cent.

3d. Number and character of bridges classified.

(a) All the bridges on the entire route are concrete, except the bridge over Little Blue River, which is a Kennedy wooden arch, and is first-class, and except the Kennedy

Tokio, May 5.—The result of the conference between the cabinet and the elder statesmen will not be known until tomorrow. It is considered certain, however, that the ultimatum calls for consent to the modified Japanese demands within a short time—some of the newspapers say forty-eight hours. There is much dissatisfaction with the Chinese attitude, especially the demand that certain sections of the Japanese suggestions be reduced to writing.

JAP SITUATION LOOMS IMPORTANT

Expected in London That Ultimatum
to China Will be Refused—Time
Limit 24 Hours.

POSSIBILITIES INVOLVED

(By United Press.)

London, May 5.—The Japanese situation loomed up extremely important this afternoon. Tokio reports say that the Japanese ultimatum granted only twenty-four hours for China to reply. It is expected that the reply will be a refusal to meet the Japanese requirements. This will be followed, it is expected, by hostile action by Japan.

British officials are watching the situation very closely because of the possibilities that are involved. The British-Japanese treaty contained no provision which would permit England to do more than advise Japan.

FLOCK OF HERON IS DRIVEN AWAY

Domicile of Bird Rare to This Part of Country Destroyed and
They Have Departed.

CLUB OUTING HERE SPOILED

The woodenter has spoiled the outing which the Indiana Nature Study Club of Indianapolis planned to take in this county, just south of here, in the Webb's ford neighborhood. It was announced some time ago that the club would come here in a special car April 25 and proceed to Webb's ford to see a flock of heron, very rare in this part of the country, but it now develops that the clump of elm trees in which the heron made their abode have been cut down since a member of the Nature Study Club last investigated and the heron have departed for unknown points.

Just before the proposed outing, a representative was sent down here to see if the heron were still nestling in their own domicile. It was a sore disappointment to the club because its members had been anticipating the trip with much pleasure.

The funeral services of Dennis Driscoll will be conducted Thursday morning at nine o'clock in the St. Mary's Catholic church and burial will take place in Calvary cemetery.

B. A. Black, who has been ill for a few days at his home in North Jackson street continues about the same.

VERDICT IS FOR UNION TRACTION

Jury Finds For Defendant in Damage
Suit Brought by Charles
Fletcher of Newcastle.

COURT APPOINTS GUARDIAN

Motion is Filed for New Trial in
Cavitt Drain Case—One Irvine
Case is Heard.

A verdict for the Union Traction company, defendant in the damage suit brought by Charles A. Fletcher, owner of a taxi cab line in Newcastle, was returned by the jury this afternoon after being out about two hours. The case was sent here on a change of venue from Henry county and started in the circuit court Monday.

Fletcher alleged that the traction company was liable for the destruction of an automobile through negligence of the motorman. The accident occurred in 1913. Fletcher demanded $2,000 damages for the loss of the automobile. The final arguments in the case were started late yesterday afternoon and were completed this forenoon. The defense maintained the driver of the auto was as responsible for the accident as the traction company and charged that the driver did not use reasonable care in approaching the crossing where the accident occurred.

The account suit of the Southern Seed Company against James T. Irvine, Sr., and James T. Irvine Jr., was tried this morning and taken under advisement by Judge Sparks. The demand was $110.

A motion for a new trial has been filed by Hal Green in the ex parte proceedings brought by Voorhees Cavitt to repair a drain. In deciding the case Judge Sparks modified the assessments of the various property owners affected by the proposed drain and in his motion for a new trial Green alleges that his assessment is too high for the benefits to be derived from the drain.

Judge Sparks has appointed Raymond Springer of Connersville to act as judge in the suit of Pearl Short against Orbie Short. It is a petition to modify a decree, Mr. Short alleging that he is unable to pay the amount set out in the decree for the support of his divorced wife. Judge Sparks was council in this case and appointed the special judge for this reason.

Elmer Humes was appointed guardian for Charles A. Caldwell and gave bond in the sum of $500. The petition for a guardian was filed by John C. Hiner and was acted favorably on by the court.

MAINTAINS ITS POSITION

Allied Line is Straightened Out,
French Assert.

(By United Press.)

Paris, May 5.—The fighting for possession of the positions dominated by Ypres continue without letup night and day. Artillery and infantry encounters followed each other and both sides are being heavily reinforced. The allied line has now been straightened out, the war office says, and all of the new positions are being well maintained.

The teachers of St. Paul's M. E. Sunday school will meet at the parsonage tonight. The Rev. A. D. Batchelor will lead the Bible study and Superintendent Leonard Clark will have charge of the business session. A full attendance of all teachers and officers is desired.

The Advantage of Royal Blood

By EUNICE BLAKE

The village of Queen Anne on the south Atlantic coast was named for the queen who was on the throne of England when the place was settled. A natural son of King Charles II. fitted out the expedition that made a village on what was then an uninhabited ocean shore. He came out himself, and his progeny now mingled with that of the other settlers. The consequence was that at the middle of the nineteenth century every inhabitant of Queen Anne could boast that he had royal blood in his veins.

Notwithstanding the aristocratic atmosphere of the place, nearly all the men as soon as they became old enough to strike out for themselves left for more active regions, leaving the women behind them. Occasionally some persons who desired a restful place to live would settle in Queen Anne, but after staying there some time, finding that none of the residents called on them, moved away. The consequence of this considerable going and inconsiderable coming was that, in time, the village was reduced to several hundred maiden ladies, all of royal blood.

One of those persons who had attempted to make a home in Queen Anne was a lady named Rutledge, from the state of Alabama. She was an invalid, and her physician recommended her to change her residence to the seashore. Her husband was obliged to make a trip to Europe and left home the day his wife started for Queen Anne, he going to New York for the purpose of crossing the ocean.

Mrs. Rutledge, who was a ladylike woman, alone and needing attention, was dismayed to find that, not having royal blood in her veins like the others, she was left out in the cold by the citizens of Queen Anne. She remained there, however, till her husband returned to America, then joined him at their old home in Alabama, where she died only a few weeks after their reunion.

One day a gentleman aged forty, well bred and apparently having plenty of money, went to Queen Anne, looked over the place, expressed himself pleased with it and gave out that he intended to settle there. The ladies of the place soon learned that the newcomer was a widower. In a place divested of men the matter of royal blood when an unmarried man was considered suddenly ceased to be of overweening importance. Every maiden of marriageable age was in a flutter. Every maiden dived into old chests to get out finery that had been brought from England long before that she might modernize it and make use of it to catch the widower.

The stranger had not been in Queen Anne a week before it was learned that he was indisposed. Miss Chalmondelay, who lived opposite his house, first became aware of this fact and hastened to send over delicacies. The news spread down the broad street on either side of which the village was built, and everybody, even to the uttermost end of the town, sent broth or jelly or fruit or some other delicacy to the invalid.

Had he consumed all he received he would have soon died of overeating, but it is questionable if he ate any of it. His servants certainly had such a feast as never before. The invalid recovered and found an accumulation of cards bearing the names of the donors of the delicacies that had been sent him, which filled a sizable wicker basket. As soon as he was able he began calling on the ladies who had favored him and did not cease till he had thanked every one of them in person.

This required time, but when finished the stranger had a calling acquaintance with every lady in Queen Anne. Some were very old and some very young. These he favored but once. Those of a marriageable age he made a list of, and there was not a day or an evening that he did not make as many calls as the hours would admit. It was evident to every woman in the village that he was looking for a wife, and every unmarried woman was hopeful.

What the stranger said to these ladies, what hopes he excited in each heart, never became common property, though there was a good deal of speculation as to what fortunate spinster would secure the prize. At one time it would appear after the bee had been buzzing for awhile on a single flower that he was about to alight, but the very next day he would be seen seeking honey from a different source.

One morning Miss Chalmondelay on rising looked between the slats at the house opposite. The doors and windows were closed, and the premises seemed deserted. That day each and every marriageable woman received a note, which read as follows:

I have decided that since there is no royal blood in my veins it is not seemly I should unite with the descendant of a king.

These notes were signed "Rutledge." No one could explain what the stranger meant by his strange conduct till one of them discovered that this was the name of the invalid lady who had recently been among them.

For a time each recipient kept her secret, but one after another, finally told, and the whole thing came out. Then they understood that they had one and all been punished for their heartlessness to the wife of the man they had hoped to catch.

WORK OF POLICE WOULD IMPROVE

Indianapolis Department Believes Every City Should Use Bertillon System of Identifying

IS NOT VERY COMPLICATED

Expensive Equipment Is Not Needed To Carry On Work, According To Bert Perrott.

(By United Press.) Indianapolis, May 5.—The announcement from Columbus, Ind. that the police department there was preparing to install the Bertillon system of identifying and keeping permanent records of criminals and suspects gladdened the hearts of "crook chasers" in this city. There is no reason, they said, why every city of ten thousand or more inhabitants in Indiana should not join the list of those using scientific means of identification. The work of the police in Indiana cities would be made much more effective, they said.

Cities in Indiana now using the Bertillon system are Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, Terre Haute, Lafayette, Evansville, Gary, Michigan City, and Jeffersonville, according to Bert Perrott the Bertillon expert attached to the local police force. Perrott said that the expensive equipment in use here would not be needed in the smaller cities, but that a camera and cards for the finger prints, with some filing system, would serve the purpose. He said an efficient member of the police force in any city could be trained to take up the scientific identification work.

When a suspect is arraigned in the local police court, he is walked across the hall to Perrott's office and "mugged." He is then measured down to the crook of his finger, and the color of his hair and eyes, his weight and his general appearance are noted down. His finger prints are then taken. With this data, Bert Perrott is ready to classify the supposed crook, run through his records and determine whether he has a "past."

If for any reason Perrott is unable to identify the suspect, he is pretty sure to get aid from one of the other offices, such as the bureau of identification at Washington, or the Bertillon offices in Chicago, Louisville or Cincinnati. The results are about 125,000 pictures in the rogues gallery at Chicago, while Indianapolis has about 15,000. While Perrott is working through his records, Uncle Sam is hurrying his photos and measurements of the newly-arrived suspect to the police in other cities. With every aggressive city in Indiana equipped with a scientific system of identification, the yegg and express car bandit would stand small chance of getting off once he was apprehended.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY.

(By United Press.)

Lima, O., May 5.—"I'm your long lost husband, H. W. Trexler," said a man to Florence Makin, 20, on the street the other night. "I've been living in Allentown, Pa., for 3 years, since I deserted you." "Uh huh, mebbe!" replied Florence, "but you gotta show me." Florence had lost a husband by desertion, but sort of forgot how he looked, she said. She put on a man's makeup and followed him "suspect," shadowing him for several days. "Nothing," she says.

MUNICIPAL SALOON MAKES $1,000 A MONTH.
Lemmon, S. D., May 4. If business keeps up for the next two months as it has since last July Lemmon's municipal saloon will have contributed approximately $12,000 toward the schools and municipal improvements. The monthly profit of Lemmon's one saloon is $1,000 a month.

Before the last law limiting the number of saloons per capita through out the state Lemmon with a population of 1,255 inhabitants, had 8 saloons. Competition was keen and to make their respective saloons "attractive" some of them became the lowest manner of dives. When the per capita law was passed, Lemmon was allowed two saloons. There was intense rivalry for the two licenses. A proposition that the city go into the saloon business was put to a vote and failed.

Then the Lemmon Civic Association was formed after the city last spring adopted the commission form of government. The association included men of many different walks of life and business. Ministers were among the membership. The association was given a saloon license. A manager, one of the strongest prohibition workers in the city was appointed. He receives no salary. The two barkeepers receive such good salaries that graft of any kind is eliminated. A blacklist contains the names of persons who cannot buy liquor here. Patrons who once show a disposition to look even one time too frequently into the cup that cheers are blacklisted. Known drunkards may not enter the saloon; neither may persons whose families are known to be in want. Mayor B.R. Watt is one of the strongest boosters of Lemmon's municipal saloon.

"Since the saloon started last July," said Mayor Watt, "it has given satisfactory results from every point of view. When we had eight saloons here you can readily imagine what element dominated our politics. We have eliminated nearly all of the factional fighting and are all now working for the best interests of our city. We have practically no drunkenness in Lemmon. Certainly no man has become a drunkard in Lemmon since the municipal saloon started. I would sure recommend it as being far above private ownership."

VOTES "DRY" FIRST ELECTION EVER HELD

Hartford City Casts Majority of 101 Out of Total of 1,333 Against Saloons.

CITY "WET" SINCE 1842

Hartford City, Ind., May 5.—This city voted "dry" in yesterday's option election by an unofficial majority of 101. The total vote was 1,029 as against 1,333 in the last mayoralty election. The "drys" polled 865 and the "wets" 764.

In 1909 the city retained the saloons under the county local option law by 134. The vote was got out early, more than two-thirds being polled at noon. There was little trouble at the polls, few challenges being made, and there was only one arrest. The ringing of church bells announced the victory.

So far as history is recorded this is the first time that Hartford City has been "dry" since 1842.

"No whiskey was sold in Hartford City in 1842," says an old county history.

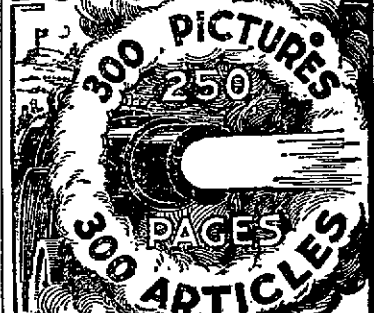

The vote was the heaviest ever cast in a city election, being 326 greater than for mayor in 1913. Fifteen saloons will go out of business within ninety days.

In placing credit for the victory the "drys" give great praise to Evangelist Bob Jones who conducted a four weeks revival in this city last February.

Not Conducive to Respect.

Terre Haute can not refrain from breaking into print. There seems to be something in the air that is conducive to publicity. Now comes the city council and causes itself to be held up to ridicule by its improper and disrespectful attitude displayed toward a resolution from the Woman's Council of Terre Haute, asking that when the time comes the common council choose a mayor to fill the vacancy caused by Mayor Donn M. Roberts impeachment by a preferential election, or by choosing some man free from political entanglements and who has the recommendation of the people.

According to reports from Terre Haute, the things which transpired at the council meeting when the resolution was read were anything but that which would inspire the respect of the people in its governing body. The president of the council is reported to have said in a loud voice: "Thanks! Thanks! Why, I won't even act on your motion, Mr. Monninger (referring to a motion instructing the city clerk to write the women of the city and thank them for the interest they were taking in the city's affairs). I guess the safest way in this matter is to leave it dead and gone. If this council hasn't brains enough, it will not have to go to skirts to get it."

What is there about the city of Terre Haute that breeds contempt for woman and causes the president of its common council to refer to them as "skirts?" Apparently, the proper respect for womanhood is lacking.

Public Spiritedness.

The community as a whole is indebted to the committee of five men who gave freely of their time and talents to prepare the statistics required by the Dixie Highway commission on all proposed routes for the highway. The extended report required some labor and skill and the committee is entitled to a vote of thanks for this display of public spiritedness which makes communities grow and better places in which to live. The bare fact alone that the committee did something to help Rushville by doing all it could to locate the Dixie Highway should not be considered within itself, because before anything of that sort can be accomplished, there must be the proper feeling of home pride and the desire to do something for the good of the whole, which precludes all selfish interests.

In the absence of an official statement, may we be allowed to presume that the receivership proceedings for the United States Board and Paper company of Carthage is due to the psychological depression? If the receivership were psychological instead of actual, it would not be so bad.

COUNTY DEPOSIT ON THE INCREASE

Monthly Statement of County Treasurer Shows $126,788.48 More in April Than in March.

IS DUE TO SPRING PAYMENT

Interest is Also Much Larger Than Received in Many Months on Account of Heavier Deposits.

The county had a total of $352,373.54 on deposit with the various banks and trust companies of the county on May 1. This is shown in the monthly statement of the county treasurer to the board of finance. This sum is $126,788.48 greater than the previous month. This is accounted for by the fact that the spring payment of taxes came in at this time and was deposited in the different banks and trust companies.

The interest received on this sum was $423.90. This is the largest sum of interest received in several months. The interest for the month of March was $380.20. The settlement with the state will be made May 25 and this sum will be cut down considerably for this month.

The amounts on deposit in the various banks and trust companies at the close of business May 1 was as follows:

Rush Co. Nat'l.	$75,712.01
Rushville National	$9,419.26
Peoples National	63,435.46

(Prepared by the United Press From Records in State Library.)

Growing sentiment against laxity in efforts to reform incorrigible boys swept Indiana in the year of 1866 and the result was that the Reform School (now known as the Indiana Boys' School) was established within a few months after the session of the legislature in 1867. Following this, in 1873, a Woman's Prison and Girl's School was built in Indianapolis. In 1907 the Girl's School was transferred to Clermont, Indiana and made a separate institution.

WANTS PAY FOR SEWER HE PUT IN

Ben A. Cox Represents to City Council That he Has Not Been Rebated For Money Spent.

IS REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Report of Superintendent Mahin Shows That General Inspection of City Plant Was Made.

The city council had a lengthy discussion on the North Perkins street sewer question last night. Some time ago the council ordered the sewer disconnected unless some taps were paid for. George W. Young appeared before the council representing Ben A. Cox.

Back in 1912 Mr. Cox and Joe Lakin constructed that part of the sewer north of Eleventh street in the Stewart & Tompkins addition. The sewer has become a part of the city system. Mr. Cox paid for the sewer and expected to be rebated by the other users. Several taps were made that were never paid for and he wants the city to make some kind of an arrangement for collecting the money.

Mr. Cox has something like $140 coming to him on the sewer. The extension was made under order of the old council. It is understood that the old council agreed to pay Mr. Cox for putting in the sewer just as fast as any of the property owners connected with it but so far he has received no money. Mr. Young wanted the city to tax the property owners there and collect for the sewer. The matter was finally referred to the sewer committee, with the city attorney added. They are to report at next meeting and it is believed a satisfactory agreement will be reached.

There was nothing of great importance before the council last night. The treasurer's reports for the months of March and April were read to the council and ordered referred to the finance committee.

The sale of the old sprinkling wagon was left to the street committee, with the street commissioner added. The city has two offers for the old wagon and the committee will sell it to the best bidder.

The report of Superintendent Mahin showed that the big reservoir had been cleaned and cemented and a general inspection of water plant made. All of the necessary repairs have been completed that the plant is in good condition. It was stated to the council that there were still about 200 water meters to be installed. Boiler inspectors reported that all three of the boilers at the water plant were in good condition.

double arch wooden bridge over Big Flat Rock just south of Rushville, which is a fine piece of work, and except the steel bridge over Little Flatrock between Rushville and New Salem. These bridges however are in first-class condition at all times. All the rest of the bridges are concrete.

4th. Streams without bridges and conditions of fords. Answer. None.

5th. What arrangements have been made for putting these roads in first-class condition and maintaining them? Character of roads to be built in every particular. Answer. All of the route through this County is a free turn pike as above described, and we are enclosing resolutions showing that Commissioners will maintain this road at all times, and keep it in fine condition. (See resolutions of the Dixie Highway Commissioners.)

6th. What guarantee will be furnished that road will be built as represented? Answer. The road is already built and will be maintained as per record of County Commissioners.

7th. At what date can road be ready for dedication? Answer. At any time the Commissioner would so desire.

8th. population to be served, tributaries, feeders, historical attractions and such other data as advocates may wish to submit. Answer. Population to be served in Rush County would be about 20,000, with Rushville having a population of about 6,000. Tributaries and feeders would be excellent both through the north, south, east and west, as Rush County prides itself as having the best system of roads of any county in the State of Indiana. Historical attractions. (See description of Highway below.)

9th. Copies to each member. Answer. We are sending a copy of this report to each member of the Highway Commission.

Description of Highway from Indianapolis, Indiana, to Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Dixie Highway as described to pass through Rush County, Indiana, comes straight out of Indianapolis on Washington street to Emerson Avenue in Irvington, thence south about one-half (½) mile to the old Brookville and Indianapolis turn pike, from this point the road is straight for about forty (40) miles to Rushville, Indiana. During this forty (40) miles there is not a railroad to cross and only one traction line. The road is a free turn pike and in very fine condition, and passes through several small towns and a very beautiful farming community. Leaving Rushville the road bears southeast toward the old town of Andersonville where it leaves Rush County.

We have in Rush county the home of old Blue Bull, and we have raised more fine horses than any county in the state. We are first in production of corn, and second in wheat. As a natural attraction we have the only Crane roost in the northern part of the United States. General P. A. Hackleman and Admiral George Brown were born and reared in Rush County.

After leaving the rich and fertile fields of Rush County, the road continues in a southeasterly direction to a point near Laurel, Indiana, where one gets his first view of the White Water Valley, which has been termed the Switzerland of America. This Valley has become famous for automobile traffic—it has a fine free turn pike, good bridges and no heavy grades. The road continues in a south easterly direction following the Valley to Brookville—after leaving Brookville you follow the Valley to the town of Harrison, Ohio, and from there on a very fine road to Cincinnati.

For beautiful houses, fertile fields, and where nature has certainly outdone herself with grandeur, this route could not help but appeal to automobilists who travel not only for speed but for pleasure.

Brookville and Franklin County is the birthplace of many of United States greatest statesmen and soldiers. Eddes, the great engineer who built the first bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis and who afterwards constructed the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, was born here.

Adams and Steele have made the White Water Valley famous from their landscape paintings, and among all this beauty and grandeur, you have a first-class road.

Yours Very Truly.

FAST TEAM IS COMING SUNDAY
Cambridge City, of the Indiana State League Will be the Attraction Against the Rushers.
ROOTERS TO ACCOMPANY TEAM
Fans Will Get Line on All League Teams as They Will all be in Action Sunday.

The Cambridge City team of the Indiana State league will be the attraction Sunday afternoon at Edgewater park. The game will be an exhibition contest but will serve to give the fans a line on the strength of the two teams.

The fans around the circuit will also get a line on all the teams in the league as a result of Sunday's games. All six teams of the league will be in action Sunday. Newcastles will play at Richmond; Perkins-Campbell at Connersville and Cambridge City in Rushville. The outcome of all these contests is watched with interest.

The Rushers will have no easy sailing in the game Sunday, according to the dope. Dr. W. R. Littell, of Cambridge City, states that some change in the lineup will be made as they are not quite satisfied with their team. This means that the Cambridge City backers are determined to have a real ball team and the fans can expect a classy game.

A large crowd of rooters is coming from Cambridge City for the game and a lively time is expected. Owing to a large number of visitors that will be in the city for the Knights of Columbus initiation a large crowd is expected at the game. In order to accommodate the visitors that desire to attend the ball game and the initiation the game will be called at 2:15 o'clock instead of 2:30 o'clock. In starting the game fifteen minutes early it will be completed in time for other things connected with the K. of C. celebration.

Manager David-on will use his regular lineup against Cambridge City and will make a special effort to top the game. Cambridge City always has a good ball club and Rushville will have to step some to win. Dr. Littell and others interested in the club expect to win from Rushville and the game will be a severe test for the Rushers, coming as it does this early in the season.

Vordenburg will be opposed on the mound of Mollenkamp, who when right will cause any team a lot of trouble. President Ritter has not yet made his umpire assignments for Sunday's games.

INSANE INMATES IN TENTS
This Condition Necessary Because Of Fire At Logansport.

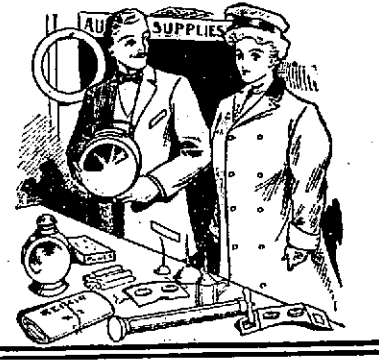

(By United Press.)
Logansport, Ind., May 5.—With army tents housing many of the less dangerous insane inmates of the Northern Indiana Hospital for the Insane and with many others in temporary headquarters in the dining rooms the regular routine of Long-cliff asylum was approximated today. These conditions must prevail for years—until another legislature can appropriate money to rebuild the $25,000 building that was recently burned. The state institutional fund is exhausted. Because of the general policy of the state not insure against fire nothing was said to the state from this fire.

PLAYER LIMIT HURTS GIANTS
McGraw Has Already Lost One Good Pitcher as Shown by Recent Performance of Chalmers.

NOW PROPERTY OF PHILLIES
Was Taken South With Team and Then Sent There—Shows up Giants in Two Hit Game.

BY HAL SHERIDAN.
(Written for United Press.)

New York, May 5.—There is fire in the eyes of John McGraw and anger in the heart of Harry Hampton and John Foster over the twenty-one player rule that was forced upon the National league this season with malice aforethought, or otherwise, but mainly through the instigation of Barney Dreyfuss. None of the above mentioned trio ever thought enough of the player limit to make it the cause of a general celebration, and they like it still less since the recent performance of pitcher Chalmers of Philadelphia.

For two years this same Chalmers vainly attempted to break into the game as a regular Giant. Last fall he went out during practice sessions and showed Scout Kinsella a lot of things that made the ivory-comber real joyous, but when Kinsella would have impressed his own valuation of Chalmers on his boss, he succeeded as rapidly as a German getting the English viewpoint on the cause of the Biggest Thing in all the World.

Hence, when the twenty-one player rule forced McGraw to look around for someone to let go, the "Little Napoleon" fixed his orb on Chalmers, when he had taken South this spring after every one else refused to give the youngster a chance. The New York B. B. club, Inc. paid all the training expenses and, to show his appreciation, Chalmers worked hard and got in excellent shape. Chalmers regretted leaving the United States for Philadelphia but he went with gratitude over the fact that he still remained a big leaguer.

His next appearance was in New York in a Philly uniform. The result of his spring training showed in the box score which recorded that the Giants made two hits and that seven of them fanned. And New York is sadly in want of pictures! We ventured to predict that there will be no twenty-one player rule next year.

A number of other National league teams have felt the pinch of the same regulation and these who figured that it might cause the quality of the baseball played by Tener's organization to deteriorate were not much more wrong than those who thought Germany had a great army.

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bridgeton, N.J.—"I want to thank you a thousand times for the wonderful good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered very much from a female trouble. I had bearing down pains, was irregular and at times could hardly walk across the room. I was unable to do my housework or attend to my baby I was so weak. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me a world of good, and now I am strong and healthy, can do my work and tend my baby. I advise all suffering women to take it and get well as I did."—Mrs. FANNIE COOPER, R.F.D., Bridgeton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartment and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer. Macdougall, Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped to his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

"THE HIDDEN HANDS."

CHAPTER VI.

Sanford Quest and Lenora stood side by side upon the steps of the courthouse, waiting for the automobile, which had become momentarily entangled in a string of vehicles. A little crowd of people were elbowing their way out on to the sidewalk. The faces of most of them were still shadowed by the three hours of tense drama from which they had just emerged. Quest, who had lit a cigar, watched them curiously.

"No need to go into court," he remarked. "I could have told you, from the look of these people, that Macdougall had escaped the death sentence. They have paid their money—or rather their time, and they have been cheated of the one supreme thrill."

"Imprisonment for life seems terrible enough," Lenora whispered, shuddering.

"Can't see the sense of keeping such a man alive myself," Quest declared, with purposeful brutality. "It was a cruel murder, fiendishly committed."

They were on the point of crossing the pavement toward the automobile when Quest felt a touch upon his shoulder. He turned and found Lord Ashleigh standing by his side. Quest glanced towards Lenora.

"Run and get in the car," he whispered. "I will be there in a moment."

"I would not have stopped you just now, Mr. Quest," said Lord Ashleigh. "but my brother is very anxious to renew his acquaintance with you. I think you met years ago."

Sanford Quest held out his hand to the man who had been standing a little in the background. Lord Ashleigh turned towards him.

"This is Mr. Quest, Edgar. You may remember my brother—Professor Ashleigh—as a man of science, Quest? He has just returned from South America."

The two shook hands, curiously diverse in type, in expression, in all the appurtenances of manhood.

"I am very proud to make your acquaintance again, professor," Quest said. "Glad to know, too, that you hadn't forgotten me."

"My dear sir," the professor declared, as he released the other's hand with seeming reluctance, "I have thought about you many times. Your doings have always been of interest to me."

"I am sorry," Quest remarked, "that our first meeting here should be under such distressing circumstances."

The professor nodded gravely. "If you'll excuse me, professor," said Quest, "I think I must be getting along. We shall meet again, I trust."

"One moment," the professor begged, eagerly. "Tell me, Mr. Quest—I want your honest opinion. What do you think of my ape?"

"Of your what?" Quest inquired dubiously.

"Of my anthropoid ape which I have just sent to the museum. You know my claim? But perhaps you would prefer to postpone your final decision until after you have examined the skeleton itself."

A light broke in upon the criminologist.

"Of course!" he exclaimed. "For the moment, professor, I couldn't follow you. You are talking about the skeleton of the ape which you brought home from South America, and which you have presented to the museum here?"

"Naturally," the professor assented, with mild surprise. "To what else? I am stating my case, Mr. Quest, in the North American Review next month; I may tell you, however, as a fellow scientist, the great and absolute truth. My claim is incontestable. My skeleton will prove to the world, without a doubt, the absolute truth of Darwin's great theory."

"That so?"

"You must go and see it," the professor insisted. "You shall be permitted a special examination."

"Very kind of you," Quest murmured.

"We shall meet again soon, I hope," the professor concluded cordially. "Good-morning, Mr. Quest!"

The two men shook hands and Quest took his seat by Lenora's side in the automobile. The professor rejoined his brother.

They entered the taxicab and were driven almost in silence to the professor's home—a large, rambling old house, situated in somewhat extensive but ill-kept grounds on the outskirts of New York. The Englishman glanced around him, as they passed up the drive, with an expression of disapproval.

"A more untidy looking place than yours, Edgar, I never saw," he declared. "Your grounds have become a jungle. Don't you keep any gardeners?"

"I keep other things," he said serenely. "There is something in my garden which would terrify your nice Scotch gardeners into fits if they found their way here to do a little tidying up. Come into the library and I'll give you one of my choice cigars. Here's Craig waiting to let us in. Any news, Craig?"

"Nothing has happened, sir," he replied. "The telephone is ringing in the study now, though."

"I will answer it myself," the professor declared, bustling off.

The professor took up the receiver from the telephone. His "Hello!" was mild and inquiring. He had no doubt that the call was from some admiring disciple. The change in his face as he listened, however, was amazing.

"George," he gasped, "the greatest tragedy in the world has happened! My ape is stolen!"

His brother looked at him blankly.

"Your ape is stolen?" he repeated.

"The skeleton of my anthropoid ape," the professor continued, his voice growing alike in sadness and firmness. "It is the curator of the museum who is speaking. They have just opened the box. It has lain for two days in an anteroom. It is empty!"

Lord Ashleigh muttered something a little vague. The theft of a skeleton scarcely appeared to his unscientific mind to be a realizable thing. The professor turned back to the telephone.

"Mr. Francis," he said, "I cannot talk to you. I can say nothing. I shall come to you at once. I am on the point of starting. Your news has overwhelmed me."

He laid down the receiver. He looked around him like a man in a nightmare.

"The taxicab is waiting, sir," Craig reminded him.

"That is most fortunate," the professor pronounced. "I remember now that I had no change with which to pay him. I must go back. Look after my brother. And, Craig, telephone at once to Mr. Sanford Quest. Ask him to meet me at the museum in twenty minutes. Tell him that nothing must stand in the way. Do you hear?"

The taxicab man drove off, glad enough to have a return fare. In about half an hour's time the professor strode up the steps of the museum and hurried into the office. There was a little crowd of officials there, whom the curator at once dismissed. He rose slowly to his feet. His manner was grave and bewildered.

"Professor," he said, "we will waste no time in words. Look here!"

He threw open the door of an anteroom behind his office. The apartment was unfurnished except for one or two chairs. In the middle of the uncarpeted floor was a long wooden box from which the lid had just been pried.

"Yesterday, as you know from my note," the curator proceeded, "I was away. I gave orders that your case should be placed here that I myself should enjoy the distinction of opening it. An hour ago I commenced the task. That is what I found."

The professor gazed blankly at the empty box.

"Nothing left except the smell," a voice from the open doorway remarked.

They glanced around. Quest was standing there, and behind him Lenora. The professor welcomed them eagerly.

"This is Mr. Quest, the great criminologist," he explained to the curator. Quest strolled thoughtfully around the room, glancing out of each of the windows in turn. He kept close to the wall, and when he had finished he drew out a magnifying glass from his pocket and made a brief examination of the box. Then he asked a few questions of the curator, pointed out one of the windows to Lenora and whispered a few directions to her. She at once produced what seemed to be a foot rule from the bag which she was carrying, and hurried into the garden.

"A little invention of my own for measuring footprints," Quest explained. "Not much use here, I am afraid."

Quest stood over the box for a moment or two and looked once more out of the window. Presently Lenora returned. She carried in her hand a small object, which she brought silently to Quest. He glanced at it in perplexity. The professor peered over his shoulder.

"It is the little finger!" he cried—"the little finger of my ape!"

Quest held it away from him critically.

"From which hand?" he asked.

"The right hand."

Quest examined the fastenings of the window before which he paused during his previous examination. He turned away with a shrug of the shoulders.

"See you later, Mr. Ashleigh," he concluded laconically.

A newsboy thrust a paper at them. Quest glanced at the headlines. Lenora clutched at his arm. Together they read it in great black type:

CHAPTER VII.

The windows of Mrs. Rheinholdt's town house were ablaze with light. A crimson druggist stretched down the steps to the curbstone. A long row of automobiles stood waiting. Through the wide-flung door was visible a pleasant impression of flowers and light and luxury. In the nearer of the two large reception rooms Mrs. Rheinholdt herself, a woman dark, handsome and in the prime of life, was standing to receive her guests. By her side was her son, whose twenty-first birthday was being celebrated.

"I wonder whether that professor of yours will come?" she remarked, as the stream of incoming guests slackened for a moment.

"He hates receptions," the boy replied, "but he promised he'd come. I never thought, when he used to drill science into us at the lectures, that he was going to be a tremendous big pot."

Mrs. Rheinholdt's plump finger toyed for a moment complacently with the diamonds which hung from her neck.

"You can never tell in a world like this," she murmured.

"Here he is, mother!" the young man exclaimed suddenly. "Good old boy! I thought he'd keep his word."

Mrs. Rheinholdt assumed her most encouraging and condescending smile as she held out both hands to the professor.

"It is perfectly sweet of you, professor," Mrs. Rheinholdt declared.

Mrs. Rheinholdt breathed a sigh of relief as she greeted her new arrivals.

The professor made himself universally agreeable in a mild way, and his presence created even more than the sensation which Mrs. Rheinholdt had hoped for. In her desire to show him ample honor she seldom left his side.

"I am going to take you into my husband's study," she suggested, later on in the evening. "He has some specimens of beetles—"

"Beetles," the professor declared, with some excitement, "occupied precisely two months of my time while abroad. By all means, Mrs. Rheinholdt!"

"We shall have to go quite to the back of the house," she explained, as she led him along the darkened passages.

The professor smiled acquiescently. His eyes rested for a moment upon her necklace.

"You must really permit me, Mrs. Rheinholdt," he exclaimed, "to admire your wonderful stones. I am a judge of diamonds, and those three or four in the center are, I should judge, unique."

She held them out to him. The professor laid the end of the necklace gently in the palm of his hand and examined them through a horn-rimmed eyeglass.

"They are wonderful," he murmured, "wonderful! Why—"

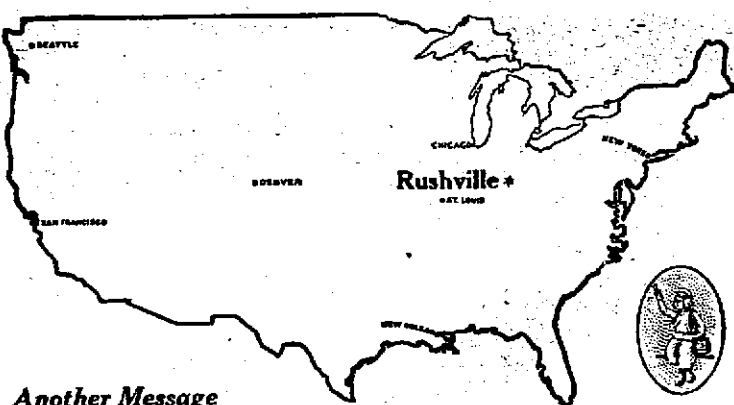

He turned away a little abruptly. They had reached the back of the house and a door from outside had just been opened. A man had crossed the threshold with a coat over his arm and was standing now looking at them.

"How extraordinary!" the professor remarked. "Is that you, Craig?"

"Yes, sir," he replied. "There is a rainstorm, so I ventured to bring your mackintosh."

"Very thoughtful," the professor murmured approvingly. "I have a weakness," he went on, turning to his hostess, "for always walking home after an evening like this. In the daytime I am content to ride. At night I have the fancy always to walk."

To be continued.

To the Business Men of Rushville

Business fights shy of dead towns. A sure sign of a dead one is the lack of local pride. People who live in a live, prosperous town show it. Their stores are attractive, their streets clean, their homes are well painted.

Nothing shows a lack of pride, a lack of prosperity, like paint-hungry buildings. Let's paint up. As the most durable and economical paint, we recommend

NOW PRACTICALLY WIPED OUT

Believes Many Farmers Sell Their Timber Too Cheap—One Case Where Money Was Lost.

BY BURTON K. STANDISH
(Written for United Press.)

Washington, May 5.—"The Quaker of Politics," A. Mitchell Palmer has retired from politics.

Ha, you say, no place for a Quaker! But you are wrong. Quakers ought to be in politics, says Mr. Palmer; just as all good citizens ought to be in politics. Palmer ought to know for he has seen considerable politics in the less than 43 years of his life. After three terms as Congressman from Pennsylvania, he made the race for U. S. Senator against Boies Penrose, obtaining thereby more experience perhaps, than the average politician obtains in a lifetime. He was among the most active of Wilson's managers at the Baltimore convention and is chairman of the executive campaign committee of the Democratic national committee.

He became judge of the U. S. Court of Claims May 1. Friend Palmer believes that idealism and politics need not seriously conflict. "The idealist must go into politics," he said the other day, "practical politics." He must accept public place. Not merely that, he must seek it. The maxim, "The office should seek the man," is very pretty in theory, but it will not work out in practice. While you wait for the office to seek you it is filled by the man who sought it. The man who is modest, sensitive and diffident had better overcome the handicap of his nature before he undertakes to right the wrongs of the world. He may be a reformer, but he never will reform anything until he has become self-confident, unmoved by slander, and aggressive.

"Just how far the idealist may go in accepting the methods of practical politics to accomplish his purpose is a difficult question. He may go so far that the public will doubt his sincerity and judge him by his methods rather than by his avowed purpose. Because his methods bear close resemblance to those which have carried unholy causes to temporary victory, he will find himself under suspicion and put upon the defensive at the very time when all his powers should be employed in offensive attack.

"Or, he may err in the other direction, with as fatal results. If he scorns the practical methods of political work, frowns upon organization and refuses to employ the weapons most feared by practical men in the enemy's camp, he is liable to wake up after the battle to find all efforts have been wasted on an elaborate organized, drilled, and trained to stand pat and sit tight in the midst of the shooting and the tumult, machine.

"He should go just as far as it is necessary to go to accomplish results, without sacrifice of principle or recession from ideal. As providence is on the side of the heaviest artillery, so political success is on the side of the best organization. The reformer who scorns the watcher at the polls because he dirties his hands with practical work of the organization, may perchance have no higher ideals than the worker himself. The gravest error into which young men of high ideals and noble purposes are apt to fall is to hug the delusion and act on the theory that all practical organizations are operated for selfish and improper purposes, and that only the impractical, theoretical man can possibly be honest in political effort. They should make up their minds to accomplish their purpose through existing channels, instead of trying to carve other ways, long abandoned by practical men because leading nowhere.

"They should affiliate with the organization of party to whose principles they adhere, in precinct, ward, city and state and if after careful study they find that organization is being employed for purposes other than the common welfare, they should undertake to clean it from the bottom up, and make it what it ought to be—a powerful machine for the accomplishment of honest government. When they cannot accomplish within the organization what they conceived to be the true purpose of their political effort they are justified in protest by political action independent of party. The only man who is less patriotic than the man without a party is he who never will leave his party for any cause."

Selling Is MORE than Trading Stock for Money!

Selling is part of the scheme of business. Most anyone can sell once, but selling so you can create permanent customers is selling successfully. That is why we carry the large stock of buggies we have on our sample floor for prospective customers or purchasers to make their selections from. They don't have to take something they don't want, as we carry every style of buggy that there is a demand for. Then after the customer has made his selection from our stock we tell him exactly what the buggy is and it has to be just as we represent it or we make it that way. The customer takes no chances. He is sure to get just what he pays for. ONE sale reduces itself to a confidence game unless the buyer is perfectly satisfied. Satisfaction sends a customer away with a smile that won't come off. That is why our buggy business has grown. We have found out how to hold customers after we get them and every satisfied customer is bound to bring a new customer sooner or later. Right now our stock of buggies is complete and if you are needing a buggy come in and make your selection. We have the style you want and we would be glad to have you for one of our satisfied customers. We know you will be glad when you give us your vehicle business, so do it now.

was not working when the war broke out, and the stress of 1907 might have been repeated. But the Aldrich act, he asserted made it possible for the banks to get all the money they needed.

He pointed to some of the disadvantages and advantages of the new law from the standpoint of the city bank. One of the latter, he declared, was that the city bank now has a definite place to discount. It also makes it possible, he continued, for the city bank to do business without collateral or commercial paper. The law will probably enable them, he declared, to do away with debit balances. It also may reduce exchanges, he added, and is far reaching in its comfortable assurance it gives the banker.

Some of the disadvantages to the country bank through the new law, he asserted, were the loss of exchange, and the likelihood that the collectable balance with the federal reserve bank may be larger than anticipated, which will make necessary a larger reserve and a consequent loss of interest. The last advantage, he said, was that the country bankers will have to carry accounts to cover their collections.

Some of the advantages, he declared, were that the new law provides a place to apply for credit or currency. This ought to appeal to country bankers more than city bankers, he added. Elimination of the dread of discounting was also another advantage he referred to.

Mr. Watson asked what he could talk about before a crowd of bankers when he was called on. He said he might get a crowd of borrowers together and invite a revolution. Mr. Watson declared he was immensely interested in that part of the new banking law referring to overdrafts. Mr. Watson declared that it was a good thing for business men to get together because if they do not get together there will be no business to protect. He asserted that the time is coming when business must be unfettered and unshackled because there had been too much of the viewing of business with suspicion. He expressed the belief that there could be honest big business as well as honest little business, and that its honesty all depended not upon its size but upon its character.

Mr. Watson recited some stories that were very much to the point and was frequently applauded. Mr. Davis also had several timely stories that brought many outbursts of laughter from the bankers.

John W. McCordle, former member of the state board of tax commissioners, talked on "Taxation," pleading for uniformity in taxation. Lewis M. Sexton, as chairman of group six, presided, and E. B. Thomas welcomed the visiting bankers here. His speech was most timely and well taken, and in a vein that made the visitors feel at home. His welcome was commented upon by other speakers.

The response of John P. Frenzel, Jr., of Indianapolis, president of the State Bankers association, was equally pleasant and conducive to arouse the feeling of good fellowship. After opening with the singing of "America," the Rev. C. M. Yocum of the Main Street Christian church, gave a short prayer. Following the address of welcome and response, the roll call was made, the report of the secretary heard and the nominating committee appointed.

GERMANS ARE MORE CONFIDENT TODAY

Flags Flying and Bands Playing in Berlin as Regiment After Regiment Entains.

THESE ARE STIRRING DAYS

(By United Press.)

Berlin, (By Way of The Hague and London), May 5.—The Germans today are more confident than ever before that all efforts of her enemies to crush her has proved in vain. With a threefold offensive in Flanders, in Galicia and in northeast Russia being successfully prosecuted, there was a spirit of enthusiasm displayed here today in all circles that exceeded even the stirring days immediately following the outbreak of the war.

Flags were flying everywhere today, the imperial standards of Germany and Austria predominating, although there is a goodly showing of the Turkish crescent. Bands played as regiment after regiment passed through the city to entrain for the front.

SUBMARINES WERE RUNNING AMUCK

Eleven British Trawlers Reported Sunk Yesterday and Today by German Sea Ship.

CREWS OF ALL ARE LANDED

(By United Press.)

London, May 5.—Eleven trawlers of the North Sea fishing fleet have been sunk in the North Sea by a sea-going German submarine with a fusiform of the iron cross painted on her conning tower. They are the Hector, Progress, Coquet, Iolanthe, Hero, Northwards and Bob White of Hull, and Grimsby. All of their crews are safe after an exciting experience in the open sea in small boats.

The fleet was fishing on Monday when suddenly the big German submarine appeared in their midst.

The submarine attack is designed to destroy the trawler fleet in the hope of preventing use by the admiralty of the fishing fleet for mine sweeping and to stop all fishing.

SAYS SINKING WAS TREATY VIOLATION

Latest American Note to Germany on Destruction of William P. Frye is Made Public.

SUGGESTION NOT CONSIDERED

(By United Press.)

Washington, May 5.—The latest American note to Germany on the case of the bark William P. Frye, sunk by a German raider, was made public by the state department today. The Fry's destruction was referred to as a "violation of treaty obligations imposed upon the Imperial German government under existing treaty stipulations between the United States and Prussia."

The United States, it was continued, will not consider the German suggestion that the legality of the ship's capture and destruction or the amount of indemnity be submitted to a prize court.

Every HOUSEKEEPER Is DELIGHTED

when she has added to her establishment some choice possession that will stay good, that she knows will not get shabby and have to be replaced in a short time.

Whittall Rugs

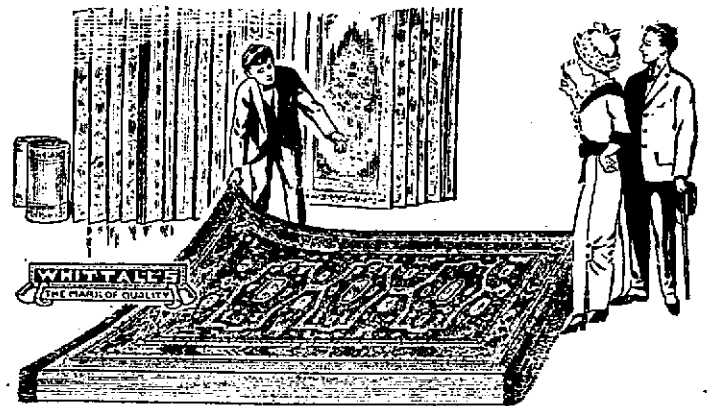

means just that to everyone who has ever had experience with them.

THEY ARE CHOICE POSSESSIONS AND THEY STAY CHOICE.

When you invest your money buy a standard article. Whittall Rugs bear their distinguished mark. The name Whittall's is woven into the back of every rug and every yard of carpet, just as standard silver bears the "Sterling" mark and gold bears the Karat stamp. Look for it when you buy rugs and carpets.

Grass Rugs For the Porch

Sanitation safeguards to health. A few whisks with the broom and our grass rugs look like new. No wooly fibres or open pores to catch germ laden dust, no hours of back breaking porch scrubbing necessary. All Sizes. All Grades. All Prices.
